Yeah, you're right. I mean, what's so appealing about the idea of getting hitched to some young, supple 20 year old woman from the Philipines with a beautiful face, a nice body, and perhaps a great personality to boot? Go figure...

It's probably time to put out the (UPDATE, LONG) posting at the next report to the newsgroup. In the meantime, I can at least post my standard rebuttal to accusations that this project is SPAM.

This project is not SPAM for the following reasons, some of which are common sense, some of which are legal (based on an informal opinion from a local lawyer with some expertise in Internet-related law; since this was just consultation and not a formal client relationship, take with the appropriate disclaimers).

- It is arguably not SPAM to send a response to a specific post, on a specific newsgroup, for a specific newsgroup-related reason, and do so one time to a given user. The automation is merely a means to an end, and does not, in and of itself, constitute SPAM. When you post to a newsgroup, you invite a reasonable amount of replies on topics relevant to that post and that newsgroup.

- The small number of messages sent on a daily basis (usually no more than 10-15) keeps it under arbitrary definitions of SPAM without even considering exceptions or discretion (usually 25, as in the Novia AUP).

- Unlike most all SPAM, the message is from a specific, real originator who reads and replies to all responses (if you write to me in reply to the message, I will get your message, will read it with interest, and will promptly send you a polite, considered reply). I realize that sending such a message invites replies, and I welcome them.

- The originator's ISP is clearly identified, and has a real address where you can direct any concerns and likely also receive a polite, considered reply.

- Inherent in this project is a "do not call" list. You are automatically put on it the first time you post, but can also be added to it at any time by writing to pschleck@novia.net.

and this one is the most interesting of all (told to me by the lawyer):

- SPAM by most laws and regulations aimed at it, is defined as having commercial content. While I believe that other aspects of the content and how its presented does affect whether it is abusive or not, in terms of most laws established to date, my message is arguably not SPAM simply because it is not commercial in nature.

He's probably quite real. His host name (joma.dr.ag) can be looked up via DNS, and it has an IP address of 209.237.241.170. Better inform your next of kin. Akhbar got Todd, and now he's after you. How scary.

Seen a couple of the hand helds so far. The kenwood copies are very good. The motorola radios are also very good. I noticed Andy posted in vkham that he didn't like one of them. It had a dtmf tone that was too quite to use in triggering echolink or irlp nodes via radio. But in general there has been good reports from a highly qualified tech in a government sector that has been testing them for some time now.

Actually, there are various sign languages, often corresponding to national languages, and I've been told that although they tend to have more in common than spoken languages, a person who can speak one can't necessarily understand the others.

That's what all paranoid people claim. However, in your case you really do have someone after you. First he got Todd; now it looks like he may have gotten Wiseman, and he has publicly stated that you're on his jihad list too.

I would lock all the doors and windows if I were you and hide under my bed. Oops! Ignore that: I just realized it didn't work for Wiseman, because somehow Akhbar got to him anyway.

Go to a new home site (under construction) and pick up a few inches of PVC 1/2 in. or 3/4 in. cut them to an appealing size and drill some holes in them at their ends and BAM, insulators!

I like mine professional looking so I buy them from Buxcomm.com. They are inexpensive and in several designs or styles and Buck got good prices too!!

I guess I sort of got some benefit from the "dumbing down" of the code requirements. I didn't have to do the 20 wpm code to get my Extra (lucky thing too because my code speed is nothing to write home about.)

I don't think the easing of the Code requirements has necessarily been a good thing. It does take some effort to learn code, which in general tends to weed out some that would be less than the ideal candidates. I suppose it weeded out some more desirable ones too, just in a smaller proportion.

Of course the Internet has no entry requirements these days. No test is taken, no skills are required and no special knowledge is necessary. In the fido net days, it at least took some computer savvy to get logged on and post. Now days it is really a free for all as folks have driven off the road of decency just for the fun of it. Chaos takes over, 2nd law of thermal dynamics at work on a macro scale. :)

I suspect that we may see some "moderated" groups popup shortly to replace these "free for all" flame wars we have now. Hopefully this can be arranged in the near future. Once the meaningful discussion is moved to moderated groups, these may just die a fitful death.

Of curse it's almost impossible to remove a news group these days, so I suppose something will be here for a long time yet. Spam and flame wars make such interesting reading.. NOT!

You are claiming that there are circumstances under which CW can be understood but none of the newer digital modes can? Assuming, of course, a skilled operator for CW and appropriate equipment for digital modes. Or even software for both.

Thats the problem. They may be clones of well known radios but not type approved as yet. Lot of hoops to jump through to import in bulk.

If you are talking about use on CB, then it seems a little strange to worry about type approved sets running at more than 5W! I mean, if they run at more than 5W it makes little difference if they are type approved or not!!!

OTOH, if they are being used on amateur bands, then they don't need to be type approved....

Amateur radio operators need to check their emergency equipment's operation ASAP. The final days, long foretold in the bible, will begin this month on date 6/6/6. That's only a few days away.

If the prognosticators are correct, Israel - which has nuclear weapons - will launch a preemptive strike against Iran and the world will eventually be plunged into Armageddon. On 6/6/6, the antichrist will reveal himself, and the spiral into a world wide conflagration will begin.

It is then that amateur radio operators can demonstrate to everyone the true value of the amateur service.

OK. I wqas thinking of weak but undistorted signals - there seems to be evidence that digital modes can get through when CW can't even be heard.
Audible but distorted signals, as you mention, are a different problem, one that I wasn't thinking of. Sort of like those distorted letters you have to decypher to gain access to restricted Yahoo groups, GoDaddy domain information, and various other web sites - a machine can certainly see them, but OCR isn't good enough to read them (neither am I, sometimes).

True. I hear the Indonesians are going to raise the cost for AA-size batteries which are currently available at the Dollar General store from 8 to a pack to 4. You know those hams, cheap bastards will get their red lace panties all in a snit over this....they use em in their HT's cause their too tight to buy spare Ni-Cd or NiMh packs.

...actually it's One Month plus six days away, but nobody said you can read a calendar, let alone the bible, so that's why you should listen to the kook preachers on WWCR and WHRI. (Brother Stairmeister was going on about 06/06/06 a few nights ago, as expected. He likes to whip up his audience every now and then while he goes hiding in the out-buildings or trailers on-the-farm to bugger ?)

the back yard buck naked with my lovely 20yo asian mail-order marijuhana plants to ensure their fertility and vitality for the comming months.

...Oh pleeeze cut me a break. Hams today can't even solder their own 8-pin microphone connectors when they break from wear, let alone re-crimp the newer CAT-5 style modular ones. That and Field Day is now a shell of it's former self with most hams operation from home on AC because they are too overweight to hoist up an antenna tower in the field for fear of giving themselves a massive CVA in the process.

(of course some will show up at FD just to visit and plunk their fat asses down at the Hospitality Tent to get a few free burgers and sodas before going back home an hour later to sit in front of the FT-1000 and fart loudly in their padded easy chairs and kibbutz on 20 or 75)

We had one guy show up last year who actually waited for the tent to clear out so he could grab about half-a-dozen cans of Pepsi to take home, never mind he could have bought the same stuff at WalMart Sam's Cola for 20 cents a can. Cheap Bastard Douchebag hams.
They be worse than the tight-wad old farts with their magnifiers that show up at the HO Model RR meets who think a rivit on a brass HO model locomotive engine that's off by 3 mils affects the value of the same.

What's the purpose of ham radio, To have fun talking about rigs and weather, or to be able to communicate?

To be able to communicate when no one else can communicate and to advance radio knowledge & theory?

What does part 97 say about this? Why does the ARRL ignore it?

When CW is lost, new hams will be just like CB'ers and SWL's, or some other lower life form of radio hobbiest. You name it.

You wouldn't remember this because you were just a CB'er then, but during the first major restructuring, the ARRL gave a six dollar membership discount to new hams and upgraders that passed the new dumbed down exams. The six dollars was the amount it took to take a test at a VE session that year.

I should be able to keep this from getting to me, but sometimes I just feel like responding to the attempted intimidation by these elitists.

Mate, your key is only silent from the neck, up.

Due to dyslexia, I am unable to learn much Morse Code. I can consistently recognize about half of the alphabet and none of the numbers. Morse Code might as well be edoC esroM for all the good it will ever do me.

In spite of this, I manage to be a responsible member of the ham radio community and I'm damn proud of my service to RACES, to my club as its treasurer and to the county as a volunteer communicator. My UHF/VHF points in last year's Field Day exceeded the points of our HF stations combined.
Lower life form, indeed! The nerve of you!

You may get down off your high horse (or should it be "High Morse"?) and apologize for all those jabs any old time it pleases you. I'll be here.

cw.h@m.bands (known to some as Silent Key) scribed...

> What's the purpose of ham radio, To have fun talking about rigs and

The Amateur Radio Service serves many purposes. Here's a relevant quote from Part 97.

§97.1 Basis and purpose.

The rules and regulations in this Part are designed to provide an amateur radio service having a fundamental purpose as expressed in the following principles:

(a) Recognition and enhancement of the value of the amateur service to the public as a voluntary noncommercial communication service, particularly with respect to providing emergency communications.

(b) Continuation and extension of the amateur's proven ability to contribute to the advancement of the radio art.

(c) Encouragement and improvement of the amateur service through rules which provide for advancing skills in both the communications and technical phases of the art.

(d) Expansion of the existing reservoir within the amateur radio service of trained operators, technicians, and electronics experts.

(e) Continuation and extension of the amateur's unique ability to enhance international goodwill.

-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-

I sure as heck don't see anything in there AGAINST talking about
"rigs and weather," or anything else within reason.

What I do see, in paragraph (c), is the use of the word 'advancing' together with 'communications and technical phases of the art.'

That, to my eyes, says "value the past, but look to the future."
The simple truth is that, while CW remains a mode that would probably be usable under nearly any conditions, it is no longer necessary as a license requirement.

> To be able to communicate when no one else can communicate and to advance > radio knowledge & theory?

Exactly. The advance of radio knowledge and theory over the past two or three decades has reduced CW's importance as an operating mode.
It still has value, to be sure, but (again) I don't see any need to make it a license requirement.

> What does part 97 say about this? Why does the ARRL ignore it?

What evidence do you offer that they're ignoring anything?

> When CW is lost, new hams will be just like CB'ers and SWL's, or some > other lower life form of radio hobbiest. You name it.

Well, then, I guess I'll be a "lower life form" in your eyes, because I haven't ever really had that much interest in CW as an operating mode. Too slow and frustrating for me, and I've not used it in over 20 years, since I got my first license (in 1977 -- look up WD6EOS in an old Callbook) and did exactly one CW QSO on the air. After that, I went over to voice and RTTY modes exclusively.

Others have been predicting the "Death of Ham Radio" for years. We heard it when the Internet came to be well known, we heard it when Echolink and IRLP started to catch on, and we're hearing it again with the potential elimination of Morse knowledge as a license requirement.

But you know what? The Amateur Radio Service is alive and well, at least in my part of the country. Lots of activity on HF AND the local repeaters, still a fair number of CW QSO's on the bands (this from tuning around just last week), and the local repeaters continued to work very well indeed after the Nisqually Quake of 2001. I know. I was here for it.

When the FCC writes to me, and tells me to turn in my license and cease operating because the Amateur Service is no more, THEN I will believe that it's dead.

Until then, let me say thank you for sharing your opinion with the group.

Here's one that I haven't even seen:

Not everyone speaks readable English, but anyone that knows Morse can copy any language and read it at their leisure. Also, those who don't speak English well can often spell the words well enough to read...

Just a thought.

In order to graduate school in the Navy we had to both read a punched

Mis-statements abound again.

Read the allocation chart in 47 CFR 97.305(a) and 47 CFR 97.305(c). What CW sub-bands?

47 CFR 395(a) "An amateur station may transmit a CW emission on ANY frequency authorized to the control operator." [EMPHASIS ADDED]

For USA Amateurs CW is authorized as stated above.

If you really believe that morse code is an important way to communicate that should be preserved then you need to convince other hams and potential hams to learn the code. You need to convince enough hams to use code so its very usage generates excitement and makes people want to join in the fun. Almost self-perpetuating like it was in the 1950's.

Preaching (or complaining) to the choir on the radio fora about the abysmal state of things will not add one person to the ranks of key pounding hams.

So what are you going to do to increase the number of code practicing hams.

CW will not be lost in the same way that AM is not lost.
A lot of hams in the 1950's believed that SSB would cause the death of AM and ham radio along with it. SSB operators sounded like Micky Mouse and were known as Single Sidewinders, undesirable snakes in the grass within the hobby, and traitors to the traditional form of amateur radio AM communications.

If you are in the US you do not need to look at any diagrams. Just get a book that has the question and answers in it. Then memorise it. They are the exect question and answers.
That will put you to the Tech license and the code may soon not be needed for the low bands.

Well, "SC" a.k.a. troll,

Cw, when it came along, was frowned uopn and was predicted to be the death of ham radio as well. Did you know that?

Modes currently around that full knowledge of is NOT required to get a licence (where complete knowledge of sending and receiving all the characters in Morse is a requirement):
AM, SSB, RTTY, PSK, Paclet, Amtor, APRS, satellite...basically everything else in Amateur Radio!

I said full knowledge. Do any of the tests require explanations of all five (or is it ten) methods (circuit types and how they function) of generating SSB or how to generate CW...or proper operating practice in all situations?

Do you know WHY knowledge of Morse was required in the first place?

I think there should be more on the tests on operating practices. I know some Techs who can do much of the above and make better hams that any old fart crying over the supposed loss of CW. I know Extras who couldn't copy code worth a darn, nor do much in the way of tech stuff...so? They're all friends.

Your fingers and eyes (or ears) aren't broke... so why aren't you out mentoring new hams? In the last two years, how many programs have you written for helping hams with things like blind hams controlling rigs or or audio tapes on radio operation have you recorded for blind hams or trips to help a blind ham erect an antenna, do a small project or program his radio or cables you've given to a new ham for his antenna or taken a blind ham to a hamfest... Why am I wasting my time with this...pfffvt

I'll save you the trouble, I'm a 60 year old, 20 WPM Extra and currently spend most of my ham time on 2 & 440 from the car during drive time on repeaters (much more omitted)!

I didn't have to learn code in the Navy (though I did happen to already know it)

Jerks are everywhere and I wonder why I wasted this time. Guess I just needed a little vent...sorry folks..time for lunch.

the nickname stuck.

Yep! I stand corrected!!
5330.5 KHz USB ONLY, Maximum band width 2.8 KHz. 50 watts ERPd max.
5346.5 KHz USB ONLY, Maximum band width 2.8 KHz. 50 watts ERPd max.
5366.5 KHz USB ONLY, Maximum band width 2.8 KHz. 50 watts ERPd max.
5371.5 KHz USB ONLY, Maximum band width 2.8 KHz. 50 watts ERPd max.
5403.5 KHz USB ONLY, Maximum band width 2.8 KHz. 50 watts ERPd max.

And, "I dare not call it a 'band'" either. Just 5 channels occupied by gentle men and gentle women, both genders, with manners.

I have three rigs that operate '60' meters. I've gotten to love that non-band.

No, the e-mail addy was his, by mistake on my wifes PC, I set it up and forgot the 555usb part of my addy. DrDeath is not stolen, as anyone , including you have every right to use it.

Or the third option, I am human and make mistakes. Read above. My addy is drdeath555usb@yahoo.com check it out. Your addy on the other hand is non existant as I tried to e-mail you. That makes YOU a liar.

The thread title is "get help". Maybe that means something sexual to you, but not me.

And then you proceded to tell everyone about it. You also stated you had sex with men. That's something that belongs in other groups, not radio.

But why do you feed others with this type of info knowing it will be used against you??

I hide my sexuallity because it is nobodies buisiness but my own. If wanted to talk about sex, I would seek out an appropriate NG dealing with sex.

Sounds like you are jealous that you were not included. Don't like the

I'm glad you refer to yourself as "The Real Ham". It's people like you, doug, and markie-tard (all hams) that post homo crap and keep me from getting my ham ticket.

I'm fearing it will be Eminent Domain ham radio style.

They'll see spectrum that they don't have the ability to use, because there will be no requirement to have that ability. They will want the spectrum for phone. One good thing, there are other modes besides CW that need it, so maybe they won't take our CW portions and give it to phone only hams and appliance operators.

Thank you.

In a way, it's sort of like sign-language. Two people that don't know each others tongue but know sign language can still communicate.

Thank you for your service to America. It is people like you that make us a great country. When hard work was needing to be done and learned you were there.

Today people are lazy and that's why they want to get a license in as easy a way as possible, even if it means the service and our ability to communicate with each other suffers.

Call the FCC, email the ARRL. Tell them you don't want to see ham radio dumbed down anymore, for the good of the service and the good of country.

But it's the lower qualifications that will cause the service to suffer. I don't think new general class hams today have as much of a grasp on theory as new ones did 15 years ago. 15 years ago, they spent more time studying the theory while they were building their code speed up.

Loss of the requirement to be code proficient though could be offset if the passing score on written the exams were raised to 85%

Yes, but can you send and receive Code at 13 or 20wpm?

What if in an emergency your microphone broke, and the only thing you had to save a life was CW? With your skills, that person would die. In that situation you'd be about as useful as two tin cans and a piece of string.

Right, that's the service nature of hams. Hams helping hams, and hams serving the community. And Dumbing it down can effect the quality of service. Maybe it won't go totally to shit while you and I are still around, but it will happen. In Life, What happens when standards are lowered, things get better?

Actually your own words have proven that you can learn it. You say you can consistently recognize about half the alphabet. So you have demonstrated your ability to learn it.

Perhaps you just haven't spent enough time on it or used a poor training method (there's way too many of those around). Most people's expectations of how long it will take are unrealistically short. For the average person, it will take 1/2 hour per day every day for 60 days.

Now writing it down could be a problem due to dyslexia but there are ways around that. You don't have to write it down. You can ask to be allowed to say the characters into a tape recorder. You could dictate the characters to a VE to write down for you. You could simply jot down notes and answer the questions and not worry about solid copy. Again if there is a risk of writing it backwards, you could have the VE write down what you tell him/her. Naturally such accomodations have to be set up in advance.

You are painting with a very broad brush. There are many amateurs who do not jab the Technicians. These days the membership of most clubs is about half Technicians. Perhaps you need to run with a different club.

Well, with the 4 or 5 CW signals that are on most bands at any given time (except VHF and up during contests, BTW), who would notice the loss. No offense, but if CW ops want to keep the territory, they'd better start populating it.

Yup, that increased the number of CW ops by a lot. Typical old style ham response. Moron. Pure and simple moron.

This is why CW is losing the battle. Not because it's a lost art, or something that's not worthwhile, but because the "supporters" do nothing but complain.

I don't want to see CW go away; I think it's a "good thing", and should stay around, especially for things it still does well, such as EME. Of course this is not the place to speak of "advanced" things like EME, after all, it's only been around for 50 years.

I love it too. It's a great mobile band, but I don't have a mobile antenna for it. I have used it with a tuned dipole a good bit. Even talked to England once. It is mostly stateside comms, but its like you said, a lot of gentlemen and gentlewomen! I am hoping to get an antenna for it in the near future for both the car and my new location.

PS there is a sixth channel only available in and around Alaska, but I forget the frequency. It is an emergency only channel.

Dumb argument.

CW is only being removed as a compulsory exam element. Oddly enough, now that it is not compulsory, it's popularity is growing!

Which is most likely, actually. We broadcast a lot more voice than CW, Ever noticed how many watts of television, FM radio and AM radio are out there versus CW?

CW is effectivly dead except for those that wish to keep it alive.
Similar to the old car collectors. Nothing wrong with it. beautiful collector items, but not really part of the current world.

My $0.02: Passing the CW element requires the acquisition of a skill.

Thank you.

If I may add something to that...
I wouldn't like to see Morse totally disappear, but I'm against its compulsion for trainees. I fully agree that in some conditions a Morse tone will get through where voice is an unintelligble mush, if heard at all, but apart from prisoners tapping out messages on pipes its days as an essential comms tool are pretty much over.

We've all got to move with the times and these days Morse is on a par with a runner carrying a message in a cleft stick. There will be some who enjoy using it and I hope they find enough fellow enthusiasts of the arcane art to keep themselves happy while the rest of us communicate more naturally.

CW is just memorizing the sounds . That is not a skill. Yes, I do have the 20 wpm extra. Got up to speed, passed the test, never used it on the air.
I still listen to some about once a month just to see if I can still get any of the characters.

A skill is more like repairing a piece of equipment or building something.
Maybe even the ability to put together an interisting conversation instead of the usual WX and Signal reports.

I don't think it is as effectice on SSB. Of course, you can use the symbols that were derived from CW (like QTH) but I think morse code is a more direct communication in these circumstances because it doesn't involve voice/pronunciation differences between languages. The symbols are universal and immediately understood.

Phonetic usage (alpha bravo whiskey hotel etc) is primarily based upon English.

I think we need to face the fact that ham radio, in general, is not as necessary or as "needed" as it was even 20 years ago.

It's a hobby. It remains a service but it is a hobby.

CW,SSB and any other mode you choose is not that much NEEDED.

CW being the simplest form, remains the form of choice when ALL infratructural resources are gone.

Memorizing a sound is no more of a skill than memorizing an answer. In any case. I can memorize sounds. I can't memorize answers. I have to know the subject to get the answer right. If people think that CW is of any importance, they will learn it whether the test requires it or not. Those who think that it will die if it is not required are just afraid that it really is useless.

Until the FCC pops your stupid ass for unlicensed transmission. Then when you have to send an explanation to Hollingsworth and or pay a fine then you'll get what you asked for. Here's to hoping that you get your ass busted for getting on there with your stupidity. Frankly, if you want to mess around on CB or Freeband, I certainly don't give a damn.

The FCC can find you in quite a rapid time if you're causing problems, it doesn't take them long with their newer monitoring technology to obtain a fix on your location.

I have an 85-year-old uncle who was a cw operator in the Pacific in WWII. He hasn't done anything with cw since 1946, and he can still copy around 10 wpm when I make him a bet.

I can go for several years without hearing cw and still step in and copy 15wpm easily.

Those of you who once passed 20 wpm tests and now find it a challenge to see if you "remember any of the characters" are simply not very bright.

Any rational evaluation of the modes available will show that there is a combination of circumstances that make a specific mode the one that will "get through". One can "prove" that their favorite mode is the one that will get through under certain conditions.

I have seen PACTOR II get through from Europe with 10 watts when there was no humanly detectable signal. All I did was choose the correct frequency and time based on a schedule.
I detected absolutely no carrier on the S-meter or with my ears in CW mode. The PACTOR II signal was literally down in the noise but my SCS PTC-IIe somehow managed to dig it out.

It is nonsense in rec.radio.shortwave. Please drop this news group from Another thread about CW is pointless. You guys have posted the same

Dee, please go back and re-read Silent Key's original post and my response.
I was reacting ONLY to that one person's remarks. I was actually narrow-brushing.

While I'm an officer in just one club, I am in three and none of them have any crummy people -- and I certainly agree with you that many amateurs don't jab the techs. In fact, I encounter practically total acceptance. That's why Silent Key stood out.

With regard to can/can't learn, I have the most problems with the characters that are four or more elements long. dit-dah-dah-dit and dah-dit-dit-dah are different, but I can't tell you what they are. I think one of them is

"P" because I remember the symmetry.

Transcribing is not the problem. If I hear dit-dah, I can write A. But if I hear dit-dah-dah-dah-dah or dah-dit-dit-dit-dit, I don't know what to write, because I don't know what those are. I cannot store the memory of what those sounds mean. Since you (apparently) don't have the problem, you won't relate.

And it isn't a lack of time or effort. I have been at this since 1993. Many methods. No appreciable successes. (I did get "D" from "dog-did-it" and "Q" from "pay-day-to-day" -- a couple of real triumphs, eh? [sarcasm intended])

This is no picnic. Thanks for understanding.

Amen!

I used to be a staunch defender of CW. We lost the 20, we lost the 13, we are going to lose the 5.

In today's age of materialism, self created rights and the liberal ideals of fairness, I'm just waiting for the removal of all testing requirments.

Just show up, mark A, B, C or D on 10 questions (no grading, just turn it in) and then get a certificate of attendance, a blue ribbon that says 1st place and a 1x2 vanity call sign.

That is correct. Let's just take a very simple example. PSK is one of our newest digital modes. When there are auroral disturbances, PSK cannot be used. The phase shifts induced by the auroral activity make it impossible for the computer to read. These phase shifts effect all the modes. Modes that depend on phase shifts (such as PSK) are affected the most severely and quickly become unusable. On the other hand, CW takes on a buzzy, raspy sound but a human operator can still decipher it although a computer will fail. I have personally experienced these conditions. If the auroral induced phase shifts aren't too severe even SSB will get through when PSK has failed. I have also personally experienced this.

Let's take another. This time packet. Packet has nearly died out on HF because it is not robust enough. Conditions have to be almost perfect for there to be a usable packet signal. Even low levels of atmospheric static make it unusable. Slight fading also causes problems. Yet voice, CW, PSK, and RTTY will all cope with conditions that can make unusable.

Each mode has its strengths and weaknesses. For each mode, there are conditions for which it will be the best choice and conditions for which it will be the worst choice. If a person wants to maximize their communication capabilities, they need to become conversant with each mode, its characteristics, and what affects its propagation. For CW, this should include learning to copy by ear. Under some conditions, the human brain is the only computer powerful enough to decipher it.

If you were in this area, I would be more than happy to take a try at teaching you. The "dog-did-it" approach is one of the worst possible ones to use. It is like trying to count the dots and dashes. On longer letters it can be a problem.

For someone like yourself, it is absolutely essential that you eliminate any and all extra translation steps. The burst of sound should register directly as a letter. In other words, hear it as a letter and reflexively write a letter. Then it doesn't matter if you happen to know the actual number of dots and dashes. No counting, no "dog did it", no "helpful" memory devices at all. They will only hinder someone like yourself.

> This is no picnic. Thanks for understanding.

Well I just wish that I could take a stab at teaching you. There is always a sense of accomplishment in expanding your abilities in ham radio. For example, in the past couple of years, I've been exploring the digital modes and VHF/UHF propagation. It's a hoot to work Texas on 2m from here in Michigan.

Complete nonsense. CW testing is being phased out because CW is becoming obsolete, period. Don't try to read anything more into it than that.

With all the great new digital modes available - most of which are far superior to CW - forcing people to waste valuable hours learning an obsolete mode is sheer folly. There are so many great things to do with Amateur Radio. Do them!

Quite correct Bill. Commercial and military have dropped Morse code for the very reasons you stated.

In this day and age, requiring proficiency in Morse code for a radio license would be as requiring proficiency in horse husbandry in order to get a driver's license.

OK folks. All I hear is whining about how things are changing. So I'll ask the question again.

If you really believe that morse code is an important way to communicate that should be preserved then you need to convince other hams and potential hams to learn the code. You need to convince enough hams to use code so its very usage generates excitement and makes people want to join in the fun. Almost self-perpetuating like it was in the 1950's.

Preaching (or complaining) to the choir on the radio fora about the abysmal state of things will not add one person to the ranks of key pounding hams.

So what are you going to do to increase the number of code practicing hams.

Don't you find it odd that people need to be "convinced" to use morse?
Nobody needs to be "convinced" to use PSK31, RTTY, SSB, FM or even AM.

Life is too short to waste it "convincing" people to use a mode they are instinctively not interested in.

The underlying problem is you want things to be like they were back in the '50s. Well, I was licensed in 1957 and I had fun back then too, but time marches on. Try marching along with it.

Actually if you go back and re-read the entire message I think that consequence have abandoned it.

I have the same problem with the code. My brain wants to identify or count the dit/dahs and then translate them into the character. Learning each character as a quick burst of sound, as if it were sent at an equivalent speed of perhaps 20-wpm, is probably the best method.
I never got beyond about 10-wpm after practicing on and off for many years, sometimes for months at a time. I used to listen to the code practice transmissions on W1AW every night. If the 'General' code requirement had been 3-wpm less, I might have been a ham' decades ago but I wanted HF phone privileges or nothing (stubborn me). I didn't have any interest in getting a Technician license or being a Novice until it expired because of my code limitations. I don't think learning the code has much to do with intelligence or even motivation to a certain extent.
Some folks are just not wired for code. I could have passed the Extra exam' in the days before the questions were available to be memorized but that 20-wpm was the problem. I tell myself it was amateur radio's loss. :-)

In the olden days, the purpose was well understood. It was, and still is, to become proficient in one or more aspects of radio communication, to provide a skilled base of technically proficient people who pursue an interest in some aspect of radio communication technology and art for personal gain without any financial interest, reward or compensation from the activity.

It is NOT to open a box, plug it in, connect a wire, and, when it doesn't work, get on the internet and ask for help.

I advocate for a code test for the following reason. I value what I have to plan for, work for, sacrifice for, and invest my time for.

I value the reward for 18 months of practicing Morse Code every night for one hour a night. That's an investment.

I value the reward of studying, really studying, to understand the electronics for my Technician License. That's an investment.

I value the reward of studying, really studying, to understand the electronics for my General License. That's an investment.

I value the reward of studying, really studying, to understand the electronics for my Advanced License. That's an investment.

I value the reward of studying, really studying, to understand the electronics for my Extra License. That's an investment.

It took me 45 years to progress from Novice to Extra. [Note: I was 25 wpm CW proficient in the 1960s. Marriage, Family, Profession took priority over Ham Radio.]

I teach Ham Radio classes. I'm a registered ARRL instructor. I'm not invited to teach too often in these days. I DO NOT teach Q&A. I WILL NOT teach Q&A. I teach understanding of what's behind the Q&A.

My Technician classes begin with ELEMENT 1. It takes 3 to 4 weeks at two hours a week for classes to pass Element 1. It takes 10 to 12 additional weeks of a two hour class one night a week plus homework to pass the Technician exam.

Those who choose this path have made an investment of their time and effort. I hope they value that investment.

I WILL NOT support a 4 hour session on a Saturday morning and hooray! You are now a ham!!!

BTW, FWIW, I'm still learning from the skills and experiences of Roy, Cecil, Rick, et al on the antenna n.g.

/S/ Dave, W1MCE

262. ICOM 02-AT QUESTION

I have a 22-year old Icom 02-AT that has worked reliably until now, when it ceased putting out any transmitter power whatsoever.

Shall I assume the obvious, that the final (amplifier) transistor has blown? (They're easy enough to replace in most radios.) Or is there something else that's known to fail in these (particular) radios that results in a loss of transmitter power?

And can anyone please tell me the part number of the power device used in the final amplifier? Thanx.

The only problem with the EEs that I run across, is they know just enough to get themselves hurt and/or burn their homes down when they try to work with ELECTRICITY instead of electronics. It seems that at 240vac, all their common sense goes out the window.

That is exactly the point I was trying to make. If one is content to turn off the radio and not communicate at times when signals are distorted, then various modes become less important. But I prefer to be able to communicate as long as possible. Thus I consider it part of my goals as a ham to be as conversant with as many modes as I can. I have setup and operated the digital modes, including building my own sound card interface (even though I don't normally attempt soldering), just to gain experience in them even though I have no real interest in operating them per se. Pounding away at a keyboard is too much like the internet or my job.

To clarify, specify the conditions, and the "best mode" becomes evident. With distorted signals, CW wins with voice coming in second. With weak signals, some digital modes win with CW coming in second. For power consumption for a given signal strength, the digital modes come in last since you must have power to run the computer. And the power to run a computer alone (depending on the computer) is often more than enough to run a 100w CW or voice signal. So you add the digital signal and the digital modes become "power hogs."

Every mode has value.

Does it still receive correctly?

What usually happens, is the synthesizer quits, and it stops sending, or receiving.

The output transistor is a T05 (TO39) type package, and is soldered to the metal frame that surrounds the radio. It is very special, in that the case of the transistor is connected to the emitter. Most transistors in that package have the case connected to the collector. This is done so that they could run the emitter grounded (as is usual) and not need any insulated heatsinking hardware.

The usual way of blowing the output transistor in an 02AT is to use a battery pack that supplies more than 9v, or to try and power the rig directly from your car battery. ISTR that a short on the antenna is a third way.

Dave, W1MCE, BSEE [ElectriCAL Engineer]

Never worked as an electriCAL Engineer. Designed transistors for almost four years. Designed USAF Flight Line Test Equipment for six plus years. Designed USAF Computer Controlled Avionics Test Equipment for 10+ years. Spent 3 1/2 years as Field Engineer at Hill AFB, UTAH on Computer Equipment. Worked for 7 plus years on the Effects of Nuclear Weapons on USAF strategic assets. Spent part of three years at the Nuclear UGT facility in Nevada. Spent 6 plus years as Chief Engineer on the USAF MX Missile RS/RV. Finished up as System Engineer on the RF Subsystem Force Modernization for the MK21 RV. In between, I managed the Strategic Product Design, Electronic Department for three years, now retired.

I still have my text books on HV transformer design, Generator Design, Fluid Dynamics, Thermo Dynamics, three phase power distribution, etc. around here somewhere ... I hope.

My VP Engineering, to paraphrase his judgment, claimed: "Give me an Engineer with a good Physics background and a good Math background and I can put him/her to work anywhere. In three months [s]he will be blunder proof, in six months competent, in 12 months expert." After 30 plus years of engineering I conclude he was correct.

But, I've left BSEE behind me. I retired from my profession six years ago.

And, as my wife says; "You can take the engineer out of engineering; but, you can't take engineering out of the engineer." I'm still learning from highly gifted people like Roy, Cecil, Reg, etc.

I'm still practicing my Vocation ....

CW, you are incorrect. I VALUE my license because it took effort over many years. The issue is valuing your license because you invested time, talent and energy into obtaining it. The more you invest, the more you value.

If you read the full message you would conclude that the message is about investing and reward of investing. It is not about a 4 hour cram short term memory program that yields a Technician License without the KNOWLEDGE of how to build a 1/2 wavelength dipole with coax to connect to the new out of the box toy.

When I read posts regarding 'how to ...' on some basic aspect of Ham Radio I wonder about the training, education, understanding, that went into 'studying' for that license. IMO, the license should indicate a level of proficiency that, in many cases, is missing. When I hear an EXTRA CLASS ham on twenty meters asking someone what the difference is between USB and LSB, we have a problem in training and education.

I don't know if Ham Radio will degenerate into glorified CBers. But, for many it has become a hobby of appliance operators.

If you really believe that morse code is an important way to communicate that should be preserved then you need to convince other hams and potential hams to learn the code. You need to convince enough hams to use code so its very usage generates excitement and makes people want to join in the fun. Almost self-perpetuating like it was in the 1950's.

Preaching (or complaining) to the choir on the radio fora about the abysmal state of things will not add one person to the ranks of key pounding hams.

So what are you going to do to increase the number of code practicing hams.

CW is and might be around forever for identifiers in different things.
It can be transmitted along with voice and doesn't get in the way of other things. Any loss would be the best fun I had during my Amateur Radio Service and learning Radiotelegraph Second class training. I even found a code chart at the RF desks at a NASA MSFN tracking station when I worked there. Just in case!

Fascinating! We have here a perfect example of a functional illiterate who was able to obtain a Ham license. Of course he would not like CW as one must be able to spell, and construct simple sentences, which is obviously beyond him.

274. WWW.EHAM.NET TALKING ABOUT REC.RADIO.AMATEUR.POLICY AND ITS NOT GOOD WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

Amateur Radio Newsgroups: Total Meltdown
Paul W. Schleck (K3FU) on April 26, 2006
View comments about this article!

Way back in 1972, before there was a World-Wide Web, even before there was Usenet News, amateur radio enthusiasts on the then-ARPANet organized a mailing list known as Info-Hams. In 1979, a couple of researchers at Duke and UNC developed a system that used "Unix to Unix File Copy" or "uucp" to copy files from one system to another, to make a broadcast bulletin-board system called "Usenet." The Info-Hams mailing list eventually gatewayed to this system, becoming fa.info-hams (fa = "From ARPANet"), then rec.ham-radio, then rec.radio.amateur.*.

Fast-forward to the present, and the newsgroups rec.radio.amateur.misc and rec.radio.amateur.policy are now in complete meltdown (the *.antenna, *.dx, *.equipment, and *.space newsgroups still seem to be in good shape, though). Both forums are almost completely bereft of any topic discussion. Instead, one can find run-on threads consisting of short, sniping, and personal attacks containing obscene language from what must be fewer than a dozen, mostly anonymous, users.

What happened? -- Maybe too many run-on arguments about code, or attacks on individual ham's personal character. Maybe just the anarchy and Tragedy of the Commons that is encouraged by totally-open, unmoderated forums where no one is obliged to obey any rules, and no competent authority seems able or willing to enforce them if there were any. Further fanning the flames are free, and anonymous, news posting sites like Google Groups, Yahoo, etc., as well as any news site that simply doesn't care to enforce any net etiquette among its users. Some hams have even offered the explanation that better enforcement of amateur radio regulations by Riley Hollingsworth at the FCC has had the unintended consequence of driving problem hams off the bands and onto a less restrictive forum to wreck.

As for Google Groups, it certainly deserves credit for archiving most newsgroup discussions since 1981 (thanks to old backup tapes meticulously maintained by Henry Spencer at the University of Toronto), but also a big raspberry for contributing to this problem.

This hasn't happened to every newsgroup. Even though other newsgroups have trolls, there seems to be a "immune system" of constructive users who step in both to ostracize problem users, and continue positive contributions in the face of such troublemakers. Certainly this behavior is not tolerated on web logs such as qrz.com and eHam.net. The site owners simply would not allow it. There is at least one example of a licensed radio amateur who is Dr. Jekyll on the blogs, but Mr. Hyde on rec.radio.amateur.policy. There may even be others.

I'm sure some would argue that Usenet is obsolete, and we are all better off going to moderated blogs. Still, I can't help but think that something is being lost here. For example, 20 years into the future, will we be able to read archived and indexed articles from most web logs that exist today, as we now have with Google Groups? Are there constructive solutions to the meltdown on rec.radio.amateur.*, such as converting newsgroups to moderated status, even if such moderated status is simply a self-approval, or anonymous user filter, mechanism?

Whoever you are,
I believe you will find this in the book about the early days of amateur radio. It is called something like "200 Meters and Down", or is it "Below".
ARRL has it and many ham stores do. I have a copy and have difficulty remembering the exact title. A really nice read. I also have a 1932 ARRL handbook and I think there are references to the "doom of the advent of CW" in there also.

. You, of course, know about spark. The sparkies didn't like CW and, at that time, the FCC __DID__ out law it (spark, that is).
I admit that it was a loaded question because CW stands for Continuous Wave and what differentiates it from" Spark". Probably not what the troll wanted and I know he/she/it wouldn't respond, but did it anyway.

The FCC Outlawed 'Spark' for very valid technical reasons at that time and they are still valid today. The very same logic could be used to still justify the continued use of CW as an Amateur Operating Mode; even though the requirement for proficiency in CW is not used for an Amateur License.

My arguement for CW has never been from the perspective of getting more ops. It's the quality of the operators I'm concerned about, not quantity.
A code requirement may mean someone will study the theory portion a little more while they're building up their code.

One day, when you turn on your HF or VHF/UHF rig and it sounds like CB, you'll understand where I'm coming from.

I'm going to drop this agrument because it looks like I lost and people really don't care anymore one way or the other, but I'll end it with just couple questions to all;

What is one behavior on our ham bands that might or could make you loose interest in ham radio and leave if you heard it or if it became previlent?

And does it seem like it's going that direction?

So, are you asking if people are getting rude, using foul language and don't seem to give a crap about each other? If so, yes, they are. The sure cure for that would be to increase the code requirement to 30 words per minute for general. Faster for extra. Along with that, NO license of any kind without an engineering degree. This all wouldn't do anything about lousy operators. What it would do is reduce the number of new hams. After a while, we would be down to 100 or so nationwide. The bands would get much better because there would be virtually no one using them. Something that you seem to have failed to consider is that society in general is adopting these traits you find objectionable. New hams tend to be more objectionable (under this criteria) than old. Is it because they didn't spend hours studying code? No, it's because they are products of the society they live in. Americans are known worldwide as pushy, arrogant, self centered bastards. There is a reason for that, they are.

My point was that few people here think beyond the dipole, quarter wave vertical, or shortened mobile vertical. And all of those for HF. The group is broad minded in many ways, but very narrow in others.

No license without an engineering degree would be fine by me. And follow it by one that requires complete knowledge of the National Traffic System. Which would be more inportant by far if you want to keep the traditions up.

How many here know how to pass traffic properly? Bet I can draw a line in time. And it had nothing to do with license class. I was a tech at the time. But I learned how to pass traffic, and how to be net control as part of the NTS. Because I had people on our local nets that enforced the rules. On checking in, out, and passing traffic. Traffic up into the system, and down to the final recipient.

That, my friends, was the difference. Not CW.

It's actually a good thing when folks come over from "the Dark Side". When new to Hamdom it's almost certain they'll slip up and occasionally use their old "jargon". When they correct themselves it's also a good thing, since it means they are aware of their faux pas and are working at improving their operating procedure and language.

Oh, I think people think about them. They probably just don't talk about them as much. You think I'm stuck to HF? Wanna come look at my latest 144 yagi that is nearly as long as the f/b width of my house?
"30 ft boom"
Seems I just commented about rat shack UHF antennas yesterday if I remember right. I usually talk about what other people talk or ask about..
To tell the truth, I'm about bored with the whole mess, and don't post as much about any kind of antennas as I used to. I've got so many sticks in the fire lately, ham radio is just one wee small area I mess with. And I'm getting more and more bored with it every year. I used to be able to do 55-60 wpm on CW in the late 80's.
But due to my lack of activity the past few years, I'm slipping down to snail pace CW. Now I can only do about 35-40 wpm, and it gets a bit slower every year. If you want to talk about different topics, it's up to you to start them.
We can't read your mind on the internet...

Maybe the OP was thinking of the older IC-2A. One of the battery packs for the 2A had a jack for connecting 12V to it, which allowed you to run the radio off the battery while it was being charged.
Applying 12V directly to the radio (only possible by removing the battery pack) would fry it.

The IC-02A could run off 12-15V directly through a jack in the top plate.

At the risk of going off topic, I recall someone mentioning that the RS 2 meter portable had an issue almost the same. The jack at the top was "supposed" to be for "vehicular" power - but I heard horror stories of the radio suffering damage when used in just that fashion. IAnd I've seen first hand - a battery pack that got smoked using vehicular power. It almost caught the guy's car on fire since it was near "cloth". I haven't looked at either the radio or schematic for so long - I can't recall exactly what the make-up is. I have though - heard many tales of guys blowing out radios in a vehicle. Hell, our Fire Department Squad Truck radio went out twice in 3 months from similar issues. I'm not sure if they actually figured out the exact reason as yet - Motorola and the original installer were to look over the situation. Seems to me, we all need to take an extra step to prevent such things from happening, since we can't rely on the manufacturers to do so. Just my 2 cents.

OOPS! The 02AT is ok on 12V, the 2AT has a problem with above 9V.

I had a 2AT battery pack catch fire when charging off of the car charger.
There was no fuse in the power cord, and a wire shorted inside the pack.
Poof! It ate the wires inside of the pack, and the power cord all the way back to the lighter outlet. A fuse would have been a really good thing.

Speaking of leading to a good paying career, if you're going to learn a skill, how about learning typing instead of Morse? Get on RTTY or PSK31 or one of the other digital modes and develop a useful, saleable skill. There isn't an employer in the world today (except possibly the ARRL) who would be impressed that you know Morse, but lots would like it if you could type.

...yes -- the only thing that's changed is that the little bar-graph (along the bottom) doesn't appear; as though there were nothing to be measured. And, I fell out of the repeater while in QSO (full-quieting), having to sign clear on another radio.

...the jack on the top's supposed to have an internal regulator, and I've used it in my truck on occasion since the radio was new with no negative consequences (not like the HTX-202, which was made by Maxon under license by Icom for Radio Schlock, and had issues with its external power-jack).

Maybe infrequent long-winded transmissions over the last 22 years is the culprit for the transmitter's untimely demise? (It's kept my hands warm in the cool outdoors more than once.) I've long since misplaced (or lost) the original manual, which had a schematic.

If I crack it open, I should be able to measure the voltages on the device, itself to see if it's blown. Right now, the final seems like the prime suspect. Thanx...

Yeah, I've had a few experiences myself, in years past that taught me there's no such thing as too many fuses.

My glove-compartment has an assortment of fuses of varying vintages, all acquired for that "rainy day" that some times never comes.

It would not surprise me much if the failures were due to a "load dump" event.

If the alternator is running, and supplying a substantial amount of current to a load (e.g. headlights), and the load is suddenly disconnected (e.g. headlights turned off), it's not at all uncommon for a very impressive voltage spike to be generated. This is due to the same sort of inductive "kickback" which can occur when shutting off the drive current to a motor or relay or solenoid.

My recollection is that the standard used in the automotive industry, is that electronic devices on a "12-volt" automobile bus should be designed to survive load-dump spikes of up to 50 volts. A radio designed for 12 (or 13.8) volt operation, whose finals are fed fairly directly from the battery supply, may work just fine if the ignition is off, but could easily fail on its first load-dump event.

Some sort of fast-acting zener protection, followed by an RF choke, would probably be a good idea when connecting such radios to an automotive power system.

Unfortunately, a 50-volt load-dump spike could exceed the input-to-output voltage-differential limit of common regulators such as an LM317; hence, even if you're using a regulator of this sort to power a radio intended for 9 volts, you'll probably need an upstream zener to keep the regulator from popping.

Very (perhaps highly) plausible theory -- it's too bad that Icom didn't learn from Motorola, and create an inexpensive (relatively to their radio, anyway) vehicular charger for their radios (e.g. 'Convertacom'), rather than a (potential) built-in self-destruct device.

Hi Dave,

The I was thinking of the 2AT when I penned my response. The 02AT is quite different. The synthesizer is more integrated, and there aren't nearly as many crystals as in the 2AT. I am not certain what the 02AT did for a final.

Assuming it is the same as the 2AT, it is a fairly simple job. You do need a high wattage soldering iron, so you can solder the transistor quickly.
You should be able to make a few measurements, and determine if the final is popped.

Something tells me that this didn't begin in Southern California, although we've been accused of it the last thirty years (and then some). The banter on this NNTP-feed sounds so familiar, I almost feel as though I know everyone here!!!

HF bands, like any other band when popular (i.e. skip, et al) get crowded, and hams "electronically-elbow" each other at times. (Yes, people were more polite once upon a time.)

Best thing to do is stay out of each other's ways -- in Los Angeles, we have one main (2m) repeater where people "do their thing," and the users of other repeaters usually lock that frequency (147.435 MHz) out of their radios, for fear that their ears may fall off. Many HF locals here know each other by their VHF personas, and it can be downhill from there.

If anyone finds such a repeater or user group objectionable, then consider not having a toilet. (No loo = poo.) Some hams need playgrounds, and we should all be glad that they're there:

http://www.435.org

HF, unfortunately doesn't have any such groups as of yet to confine their activities to any particular place. (To my knowledge, anyway. Though the AMers of yore had some solidarity against the SSBers.)

Repeaters are communities ("virtual communities" of perhaps the oldest electronic network still in existance), and therefore, have their own "community standards." And ham radio is also a hobby that we've probably all taken too seriously at times. 73s, all...

RHF,
My point was ...this time the FCC is NOT eliminating nor *Outlawing CW.
(as far as we know)
Spark did suck, but even so there were those that hated CW.

I chalked it up to a new op happy about working a new state. I remember having the same feelings he had when I was first licensed. I worked all states on CW before I ever made a voice contact because Novices weren't allowed phone priviledges when I got licensed. It was a blast and helped my code speed so I could upgrade to general with little effort.

My problem, a lot of new ops aren't leaving old CB operating practices behind. That is what will destroy ham radio, The CB like behavior.

It must be human nature, when you get something for nothing, you don't appreciate it as much, or try to take care of it the same as something you had to work for. That's why dumbing down ham tests is bad. Having a license doesn't mean anything.

Yup. I also had a 3A and had to be careful about that.

I know the Icom batteries I bought with and for the 02AT had a resetting thermal fuse inside, wired in series with the pack. I used those batteries with the 3AT; don't know if they originally had different batteries.

Yep, but that doesn't help much when the circuitry fails between the connector and the thermal fuse. Besides, the thermal fuse would only open if the cells in the pack got too hot... not the 24 gauge wire.

None. I have fairly thick skin, and I'm rarely bothered by anything that happens on the air. I do have a VFO ya know... IE: tuning knob for all you without an EE... But like I say, I'm pretty bored lately, I don't get on the air near as much as I used to. The boredom has nothing to do with the people on the air. It's from farting with the same basic stuff since I was in jr hi school... I don't get much thrill anymore.. Only about 3 clicks above talking on a telephone. Which I hate btw... Ham radio at the house is too easy. No challenge anymore.. I turn it on, and yak.

Wow...
If it wasn't for mobile/portable operating I would be about radio dead.
At least there is still some challenge in that area... IE: trying to put out
a decent signal with shrimpy antennas, low power, etc..
Yea, I've tried all the digi crap too, before I get 90 people telling me to get with the modern techniques....PSK31, SSTV, etc, etc, ad nausium..
I'll do it for two weeks, and then the boredom sets in... I kinda got into SSTV, but PSK31 bores me to tears... Did I say I generally hate to type...

>And does it seem like it's going that direction?

I see no difference from what it's been the last 20 years or so, except there are far fewer CW ops on the air lately. I tuned 40m CW the other night, and didn't hear a single QSO... And I'm talking the lower CW section, not the novice band.. But do I whine? Nope...Times is a changing, and there is not much I can do about it. The argument that CW weeds all non hackers is total BS... All it weeds out are the CW lazy, not the troublemakers.
A dedicated troublemaker will pass any tests needed if that's what it takes to stir it. You should have heard 75m in the early -mid 80's...

All had to pass code tests in that period. 75m is actually cleaner now, than it was then. Mainly due to Hollingsworth cracking his whip a few years ago.

Even more amazing is that no matter who starts the thread about CW, the same group of people will post the same tired old reasons about why CW is still a useful screening tool for prospective hams and how CW is still an important way to communicate. And they do not want to hear about the world as it really is in the 21st century.

Pretty much the same here too.

If I had the time at the house, I would have invested more time and $$$ in the shack that what I did in my service truck.

> Wow...
> If it wasn't for mobile/portable operating I would be about radio dead.

For the most part, I am only able to get on the air mobile from mid march until after the first frost. I am a heating and a/c contractor in south Mississippi....8am - 9pm work days, 5+ days a week doesn't leave much time for anything else.

> At least there is still some challenge in that area... IE: trying to > put out
> a decent signal with shrimpy antennas, low power, etc..

Not too much of a problem with enough money.... When I am on the road between calls, if I want to talk, I am going to talk, even though most of the time I am listening. Like I said earlier... I have more invested in the mobile station in my service truck than I have in the shack.

I spend too much time on the 'puter already, and FWIW, I was on packet in '84 with a C-64, and a homebrew modem, and customized my own software for it.

I have been active recently with teaching a class for folks to get their licenses and part of it is CW. Being here in south Mississippi and only about 60 miles from the gulf coast, we are very aware of the communications limitations and what works an what doesn't when the lights go out. CW is only another weapon in our arsonal of communications tools......keep in mind that not much works when there is NO infrastrucure left intact.

Wrong, dumbfuck Davies, tell us why you didn't show at Dalton after running your mouth on the K1TP webpage.

<whaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaahhhhhhhhhhhh!!!>

Poor Lardass, he never does get it right. Maybe if you weren't so genetically inferior and laid off that pussy/womanly Bud Lite beer, you'd actually get it right once in a eon. Yeah, fatty, Wiseman is the only customer of those services, isn't he? You are a mentally ill retard, Davies. Oh, and tell us what happened to your AOL and other accounts, fatty.

What's wrong, fatass, truth hurt about your drug addicted and drunkard parents? You are a bigger drunkard than your father, Ray Lee Davies, if that is possible.

For isolated characters, a good ear could probably differentiate them with 22 millisecond and 20 millisecond bit times (45.5? and 50 Baud).
I had a friend who said his uncle could do that.

But if the characters ran together, especially with a 1 or 2 bit stop time, your brain would have no way to seperate them. Neither can some simple hardware decoders.

I just passed my tech exam and am looking forward to the CW test. It certainly exercises a part of my brain that seems to need that kind of excercise. I'm glad it's still a requirement.
It all seems to balance out.

458. 30 Steps, reposted for new hams and those that didn't do well on their writtens.

The 30 Steps below will help all New Hams, it will also help you to find others just like yourself. These 30 steps should also be added to the present writtens.

Step One: Use as many "Q" signals as possible. Yes, I know they were invented solely for CW and are totally inappropriate for two meter FM, but they are fun and entertaining. They keep people guessing as to what you really meant. I.E. "I'm going to QSY to the phone." Can you really change frequencies to the phone? QSL used to mean, "I am acknowledging receipt", but now it appears to mean, "yes" or "OK". I guess I missed it when the ARRL changed the meaning. It is also best to use "OK" and "QSL" together. Redundancy is the better part of Lid-dom.

Step Two: Never laugh when you can say "HI HI". No one will ever know you aren't a long time CW rag-chewer if you don't tell them. They'll think you've been on since the days of Marconi.

Step Three: Utilize an alternative vocabulary. Use words like "destinated" and "negatory". It's OK to make up your own words here. I.E. "Yeah Tom, I "pheelbart zaphonix" occasionally myself."

Step Four: Always say "XX4XXX" (Insert your own call) "for I.D." As mentioned in Step One, anything that creates redundancy is always encouraged. That's why we have the Department of Redundancy Department. (Please note that you can follow your call with "for identification purposes" instead of "for I.D." While taking longer to say, it is worth more "LID points".

Step Five: The better the copy on two meter FM, the more you should use phonetics. Names should be especially used if they are short or common ones. I.E. "My name is Al... Alpha Lima" or "Jack.. Juliet Alpha Charlie Kilo." If at all possible use the less common HF phonetics "A4SM... America, Number Four, Sugar Mexico." And for maximum "LID points", make up unintelligible phonetics. "My name is Bob... Billibong Oregano Bumperpool."

Step Six: Always give the calls of yourself and everyone who is (or has been) in the group, whether they are still there or not. While this has been unnecessary for years, it is still a great memory test. You may also use "and the group" if you are an "old timer" or just have a bad memory. Extra points for saying everyone's call and then clearing in a silly way "K2PKK, Chow, Chow."

Step Seven: Whenever possible, use the wrong terminology. It keeps people guessing. Use "modulation" when you mean "deviation", and vice-versa.

Step Eight: If someone asks for a break, always finish your turn, taking as long as possible before turning it over. Whenever possible, pass it around a few times first. This will discourage the breaker, and if it is an emergency, encourage him to switch to another repeater and not bother you.

Step Nine: Always ask involved questions of the person who is trying to sign out. Never let him get by with just a "yes" or "no" answer. Make it a question that will take him a long time to answer.

Step Ten: The less you know on a subject, the more you should speculate about it in the roundtable. Also the amount of time you spend on the subject should be inversely proportionate to your knowledge of the subject even though you have no damn clue.

Step Eleven: Always make sure you try to communicate with only a handheld and a rubber duck antenna. Also, make sure you work through a repeater that you can hear very well, but it cannot hear you. This will put out a kind of "LID mating call": "Well, Joe, I can hear the repeater just fine here. I wonder why it can't hear me?" You will score maximum LID points if you are mobile, and with the radio lying in the passenger seat.

Step Twelve: If you hear two amateurs start a conversation, wait until they are twenty seconds into their contact, and then break in to make a call, or better yet to use the auto-patch. Make sure you keep the repeater tied up for at least three minutes. This way, once the two have re-established contact, they won't even remember what they were talking about.

Step Thirteen: You hear someone on the repeater giving directions to a visiting amateur. Even if the directions are good, make sure you break in with your own "alternate route but better way to get there" version. This is most effective with several other "would-be LIDs", each giving a different route. By the time the visiting amateur unscrambles all the street names whizzing by in his mind, he should have moved out of the range of the repeater. This keeps you from having to stick around to help the guy get back out of town, later.

Step Fourteen: If an annoying station is bothering you, make sure your other "LID" buddies have a "coded" frequency list. Even though "CODES" are strictly forbidden on Amateur Radio, it's really neat to practice "James Bond" tactics.

Step Fifteen: Always use the National Calling Frequency for general conversations. The more uninteresting, the longer you should use it. Extra points are awarded if you have recently move from an adjacent frequency for no reason. Make sure when DX is "rolling" in on 52.525 that you hang out there and talk to your friends five miles down the road about the good old CB days!

Step Sixteen: Make sure that if you have a personal problem with someone, you should voice your opinion in a public forum, especially a net. Make sure you give their name, call, and any other identifying remarks. For maximum points, make sure the person in question is not on the repeater, or not available.

Step Seventeen: Make sure you say the first few words of each transmission twice, especially if it is the same thing each time. Like "roger, roger" or "fine business, fine business". I cannot stress enough about encouraging redundancy.

Step Eighteen: If you hear a conversation on a local repeater, break in and ask how each station is receiving you. Of course they will only see the signal of the repeater you are using, but it's that magic moment when you can find a fellow "LID", and get the report. Extra points are awarded if you are using a base station, and the repeater is less than twenty-five air miles from you.

Step Nineteen: Use the repeater for an hour or two at a time, preventing others from using it. Better yet, do it on a daily basis. Your quest is to make people so sick of hearing your voice every time they turn on their radio, they'll move to another frequency. This way you'll lighten the load on the repeater, leaving even more time for you to talk on it.

Step Twenty: See just how much flutter you can generate by operating at handheld power levels too far away from the repeater. Engage people in conversations when you know they wont be able to copy half of what your saying. Even when they say your uncopyable, continue to string them along by making further transmissions. See just how frustrated you can make the other amateur before he finally signs off in disgust.

Step Twenty One: Use lots of radio jargon. After all, it makes you feel important using words ordinary people don't say. Who cares if it makes you sound like you just fell off Channel 19 on the citizen's Band? Use phrases such as "Roger on that", "10-4", "I'm on the side", "Your making the trip" and "Negatory on that".

Step Twenty Two: Use excessive microphone gain. See just how loud you can make your audio. Make sure the audio gain is so high that other amateurs can hear any bugs crawling on your floor. If mobile, make sure the wind noise is loud enough that others have to strain to pick your words out from all the racket.

Step Twenty Three: Start every transmission with the word "Roger" or "QSL". Sure, you don't need to acknowledge that you received the other transmission in full. After all, you would simply ask for a repeat if you missed something. But consider it your gift to the other amateur to give him solace every few seconds that his transmissions are being received.

Step Twenty Four: When looking for a contact on a repeater, always say your "listening" or "monitoring" multiple times. I've always found that at least a half dozen times or so is good. Repeating your multiple "listening" ID's every 10 to 15 seconds is even better. Those people who didn't want to talk to you will eventually call you, hoping you'll go away after you have finally made a contact.

Step Twenty Five: Always use a repeater, even if you can work the other station easily on simplex ... especially if you can make the contact on simplex. The coverage of the repeater you use should be inversely proportional to your distance from the other station.

Step Twenty Six: When on repeaters using courtesy tones, you should always say "over". Courtesy tones are designed to let everyone know when you have unkeyed but don't let that stop you. Say "over", "back to you" or "go ahead". It serves no useful purpose but don't worry, it's still fun!

Step Twenty Seven: Use the repeater's autopatch for frivolous routine calls... especially during morning or evening commute times. While pulling into the neighborhood, call home to let them know you'll be there in two minutes.... or, call your spouse to complain about the bad day you had at work. After all, the club has "measured rate" service on their phone line so they get charged for each autopatch call. Your endeavor is to make so many patches in a year that you cost the club at least $20 in phone bills. That way you'll feel you got your money's worth for your dues!

Step Twenty Eight: Never say "My name is ....." It makes you sound human. If at all possible, use one of the following phrases: a) "The personal here is ..." b) "The handle here is..."

Step Twenty Nine: Use "73" and "88" incorrectly. Both are already considered plural, but add a "s" to the end anyway. Say "73's" or "88's". Who cares if it means "best regards" and "love and kisses." Better yet, say "seventy thirds"! (By the way, seventy thirds equals about 23.3).

Step Thirty: If the repeater is off the air for service, complain about the fact that it was off the air as soon as it's turned back on. Act as though your entire day has been ruined because the repeater wasn't available when you wanted to use it. Even thought you have never paid a penny to help out with the upkeep of it.

At the same time the price of gasoline has gone up, the minimum wage has gone up, the stock market has gone up but in just about all areas of society mutual respect and courtesy have gone down.

I think it has very little if anything at all to do with Morse code.

When I was born (1-10-33) there were approximately 130,000,000 Americans. I think we are approaching 300,000,000 now. I'm still relatively polite, I think that may be why I get so many funny looks when I speak to folks. Poor as we were, I think I liked the 30s and early 40s a whole lot better. Main thing I've noticed about the more recent citizens Is that there have never been so many with such high self esteem and so little reason for it. (G) I'm a relatively recently licensed Ham (Tech-2002, Gen'l-2005) Had no real interest in CW but realized I had to pass the test to advance beyond the no-code Tech level (Besides, I figgered actually having passed even the elementary 5 WPM CW test would eventually be a prideful thing.)

I'm a couple decades younger than you (my mother was born in '33), but I have sure seen a massive change in societal attitudes since I was young.
Used to be that people understood the concept of earning what they get out of life, now everyone seems to think they're entitled to anything they want for free. Kind of sad, really.

Yessum, I agree. I always hated to work, but I always understood that it was something I had to do.
I was a high school dropout, but after I got out of the Army I picked up two college degrees. I never really amounted to much, but did pretty well for a dropout, even taught Industrial Arts in a Dallas Junior High School for eleven years. Finished my working years as a Design Drafter (CAD) for Halliburton.

Yes, and I have a request, too. Years ago Frank Zappa had a song out that didn't hit the airwaves, but was popular nonetheless and was in his 1984 Thing-fish album. I'd like you to dedicate Frank Zappa's, "He's So Gay" to Roger.

He's so gay
He's so gay
He's very very gay
He's so gay
He's so gay
And he likes to be that way
With his keys all on the right
He's into rubber every night
He's so gay
He's so gay
He's ALMOST EVERYONE TODAY

He's okay
He's okay
He's got a role he wants to play
He's okay
He's okay
He's just a cowboy for a day

Of course, his evening's not complete Without some meat in the seat;
Let's skate away
Down Santa Monica today

Maybe he wants a little spanking
Maybe he'll eat a little chain
Maybe his lover should be thanking him
For the way he makes it sprinkle Into drops of GOLDEN RAIN

He's so gay
He's so gay
He rules the city in a way
You could say
You could say
It's sorta different today
All the taffeta and chintz
And every Leather Boy's a PRINCE
Hey hey hey!
Please don't look the other way

You could be just like him
TOMORROW!
Maybe you'll get a chance To borrow (Borrow)
His bouquet
And maybe later...MAYBE LATER
We'll ALL BE GAY-Y-Y-Y-Y-Y-Y-Y-Y!
DO YOU REALLY WANNA HURT ME?

nobody is asking for free access to HF, I am not I am asking that requireents for such acces be reasonable, with the decliene in the use requirement, the same cane be said of othe rpeices of the written test signal (a UHF mode) in order to use HF spectrum is truly beyond me but

Folks

Our small city group is doing field day for the first time in quite a number of years. We are inviting local and area politicians and emergency services personnel such as fire chiefs and such. But we'd also like to have them briefly chatting with their counterparts at other clubs running field day.

Anyone thinking of doing such? If so please email me tony at ve6mp dot com and we'll see about coordinating.

We are going to try contact with HF and then fall back to IRLP and then Echolink.

Thanks.

I'm trying out the shareware program "nucode" right now. Is this a recommeded way to learn CW?

My long term plan is also to pass the General exam, then build my own HF CW receiver, and then later try transmitting low power to see how far I can go on an empty tank.

Let's use proper nomenclature. There is little danger of CW going away. What is going away is Morse Code - replaced by more efficient ways of comunication. We're always asked "What would you do is the only way you could communicate was to turn your transmitter on and off?". Simple! I'd use Tap Code - you know the "CW" with only dots, no dashes - the one used by banging on pipes, the one anybody can use without tons of practice. Arrange the alphabet in a 5 x 5 matrix leaving out K (use 'c' instead). Each letter is addressed by its position in the matrix: a = 1,1; b = 1,2 .... f = 2,1 and so on. These become your "dits" or bangs or flashes or blinks as appropriate. I'm amazed at how few know this.

why? or better what makes it higher?

to do so implies that it is accepted that there is soething worng inherantly with saying or typing "shit" when "shit' is what you mean.

given that words like "shit" "fuck" have an impact beyond their equivelanets feces, and fornication, why ot use them the only that does is foisting a morality thatI don't accept agree the word I mentioned and other are over used but that is a only a problem in that it lessens their impact not that it is worng

Your choice of language clearly identifies your value system.

The subject you passionately defend is considered immoral by 90+ % of the people in the world, and ALL the world's established religions.

A multicultural society will condone your language and lifestyle; and, YES, you must condone their 'straight' lifestyles. Any right you claim for yourself you must also respect in others with whom you disagree.

Finally, this thread is so far off subject that it deserves a quick referral to the circular file.

All you guys posting to this thread do not know anything about Usenet.

All this crap is being cross posted to newsgroups where there should be no interest in this bickering, childish behavior.

Before you do any follow ups to this message, right before you hit your send button, look at what newsgroups you are posting to. Delete (do you know how to use your delete key?) all the newsgroups except rec.radio.amateur.misc. then the antenna newsgroup and the equipment newsgroup etc. will not be seeing the posts which are IRRELEVANT.
So if you like this bullshit bickering stuff go on over to rec.radio.amateur.misc and you will see there are lots and lots of them to entertain you all night long. You can call all of the posters there names to your hearts content.

Moderators "tend" to have agendas?

Yes, but can you rightly say that "all" of them do? Of course not.

I've seen moderated groups that do quite well staying on topic w/o a lot of moderation interferaance. (I help moderate one actually) The moderation policy is farily simple, we know who's posting before you are allowed to post, then after that as long as you are not off topic you are free to post what ever you want. I have yet to see a post that I've had to reject and we've only had a few folks try to join that we had to reject. (Being obviously posted by known spammers.)

The moderation policy really determines what sort of "adgendas" of the moderators can be enforced. If the policy is "stay on topic" and "be respectful" how can that be bad?

There is also a place for enforcing some general nice things, like reducing excesive cross posting, not allowing "follow up to" headers to unrelated groups and deleteing SPAM. Beyond that you start getting into questions of opinion which I suppose "could" be seen as an adjena, but it's all a matter of what the attitude of the moderation team is.

I'd also be a lot less concerned about a "team" of moderators than I would be of just one guy. I've been on the receiving end of an iron fist moderation policy on FIDO net, and the guy who tossed me off his news group was obviously not interested in seeing or allowing any differing opinons.

So moderation is not all bad, but some is.

I don't think we can throw out the baby with the bath water, just because it can be abused.

The school yard is often lively with youngsters demonstrating their capability of spewing out newly learned potty words that they envision makes them more of a man.
However when they do mature they usually realize that kind of language really only makes them appear child like. Some never do get it.

I don't see how this is any more efficient (indeed, it appears to be less efficient) than CW-Morse code. My understanding is that Morse wisely used the least complicated sequences for the most commonly used letters. I think this is also true of PSK31, but I could be wrong.

Consider the letter "E": a single "dit" in Morse, but it becomes one "tap" followed by 5 "taps" in the above scheme. None too efficient, it seems to me.

I don't agree that it will always be abused. In my opinion if there are approparte safe guards and more than a single moderator (like 4 or more) with a clear policy that precludes the abilty of a single person to impose his personal views on the group, the chances of abuse are limited. If you start with a policy that says, posts will be approved unless.. (then proceed to define the allowed reasons for a post to be rejected) I thnk it will be very diffuclt for the moderaton to become an iron fist control of the groups. Human nature not withstanding.

Then if you allow an appeal process for rejected posts to be reconsidered I think you will have gone a long way to avoiding the problems you seem to be worried about.

No, I think somebody could construct a method of governing the control being exercised that largely avoids the risks.

I am not concerned about irona fisted control I am talking about abuse

if moderation aloows through what amounts to gay bashing will allow the agreved to respond to it. Itis my belief (and where si a link to that peom tat gies something like "they cae for the Jews and..) ignoring such is akin to moral danger for those affected and indeed all society

I didn't answer because he: 1. chose to change the subject and
2. refused to answer my question. So he didn't deserve an answer.

I wouldn't appreciate my EE degree any more if it had been harder to obtain. I just might not have obtained it. But that is an irrelevant diversion thus no answer from me.

If the goal is "better" amateur radio operators, let's make obtaining a license so difficult that only two people can obtain it.

Wrong. I am not "obessed", whatever that means. I just think it's sick that Todd is such a kiddie porn freak. HE says they are cartoons, but his ISP thought differently and dumped him.

The Lib Net pre-dates Wogie and Lloyd and all the rest of them.
The Lib Net is the ORIGINAL Kook Net of 75 Meters.
They've been around since the late 70's with the latest goofy crap for almost every Sat night running. They even pre-date the great 20 Meter and 75 Meter Net wars. Quite a unique run for Ham Radio, but HR has always attracted the screwballs living amongst us. Enjoy!

Gee, Markie. I wish you'd learn how to author at least ONE sentence that we can understand. Instead, you continue to post your gibberish with hopes that someone, somewhere will be able to comprehend what it is you are trying to say.
By the way...I didn't download any of Todd's sick stuff. The warped graphic was sent to me via email. Got it? Can you grasp that? How about I type this

I am concerned about you now, Mark. You seem to support Todd's sick mentality and that makes one wonder if you are not also supportive of kiddie

I think that Mark and Todd have a great deal OF mental stability than some of the posters in here. They just don't put up with certain people's attacks and vacuous bullshit. Especially some fake ghetto moron posting from an Altopia account. I would be more concerned about

That's interesting that WGM was in there because I listened to four hours of the show last night and W8GNQ was the person talking about the DaVinci Code and the consecration. One reason I say that is because GNQ is a Catholic while N8WGM isn't and has said so many times. Actually it was a pretty good net considering that the people on there talked about matters that have may have some pretty harsh consequences on the American way of life. However, if you choose to stick your head in the sand, that's certainly not uncommon either.

No, THEY are the delusional individuals who need mental counseling. I could hook them up with a good shrink if they would only come out and say who they are. I know a couple of psychologists personally and I am sure they could get together with them. I suspect that Randie, Not Lloyd, and other characters are nothing more than Weissman. Weissman likes to hide under a million different names on spam the newsgroup. It fits the character and persona that Weissman has created for himself over the years. He's used various screen names whether it be whinyslit, crow, his callsigns, Not Lloyd II, and others. Just do a google search of his postings back from say 2000 to 2003 and check them out. Noticeably, they come from the same place generally and eventually he gets outed.

Darn it your right! It was GNQ. I get these two mixed up

She tells him his penis is out, then calls him a pervert on his way out of the subway train naked from the waist down. Here is her website with the 3Y0X DVD/QSL NEWS. A press release sent out last week by Bob/K4UEE and Ralph/K0IR announced that the "first batch of the 3Y0X Souvenir QSL cards are in the mail. Thanks to the Herculean efforts of Bob, N2OO, and dedicated members of the SJDXA, 115 pounds of mail was sent out on Monday, May 8th. The actual design layout was begun prior to departing for Peter I. Our team photographer was given a "shot list" and charged with getting just the right pictures for the QSL. While on the ship returning from Peter I, the pictures were E-mailed back to the QSL designer and the design finalized. This is not your ordinary card, and we are sure it will be considered one of your most prized QSLs. Souvenir cards were mailed to about 2/3 of the individuals who contributed to the DXpedition expenses AND whose cards were received through the beginning of April. Over the next two weeks, the remainder of this group of cards will be processed. After Dayton, the QSL team will resume processing the rest of the contributor cards as well as the non-contributor cards. Bureau cards will be processed at an appropriate time in the future.

Please watch the website (www.peterone.com) for further announcements as to progress on the QSLing. Bob, N2OO, has asked that everyone please be patient. Please do not E-mail to Bob at this time. When the cards are all processed, he will then gladly assist with any QSL issues. We hope you enjoy this last part of the 3Y0X DX-perience!" 73, Ralph, K0IR
Bob, K4UEE

QSL STATUS OF BY4RSA/4. To see if your QSL arrived OK at BA4TB, visit the following Web page at: http://spaces.msn.com/ba4tb

QSL STATUS OF FO/DL5XU AND FO/DL1AWI/9AWI. Peter, DL3APO, informs OPDX that he just received the QSL cards from the printer and began to answer direct requests. You can check the log and your QSL status from all incoming direct cards here:

QSL R50CQM via UA3DX, by the Bureau or direct. Operators were RK0AXX and UA0AZA during CQ-M Contest. Activity was to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the CQ-M Contest.

Steve, KU9C, suggests the following when sending for QSLs for the recent YX0A/YX0LIX DXpedition:
1) Please DO NOT include QSLs for other stations he manages with your YX0A/YX0LIX QSLs; this will substantially delay your QSL return.

2) Please address your envelope COMPLETELY, including your COUNTRY if not in the USA.

3) Please, if you send him more than one stamp for your SASE as a donation, affix one of the stamps to your envelope, in the event that the other stamps are lost in the shuffle.

Steve states, "I'll be posting the logs, with the team's permission, on LoTW. I anticipate this will be not in the near future, but it will happen if you're in no hurry for the QSL. I'll be doing bureau QSLs, but I tend to do bureau cards on an annual basis. It will be several months before I start that process; I get my QSL cards in LARGE boxes, so a bureau card will not come to me for some time." ADDED NOTE: The YX0A/YX0LIX logs are now available online at: http://www.qsl.net/gdxc/Logs/logbook.htm

TO0, MARTINIQUE. Tom, KC&#65533;W, will be active as TO0O from June 6-24th. Activity will be on all HF bands CW/SSB. QSL ONLY DIRECT via KC&#65533;W. NO BUREAU QSLS.

V3, BELIZE. Art, N3DXX, will be active as V31RM during the CQ WW WPX CW Contest (May 27-28th) as Single-Op/All-Band entry. QSL route was not mentioned.

V47, ST. KITTS AND NEVIS. Reiner, DL2AAZ, plans to be active as V47/DL2AAZ from the Island of Nevis (NA-104), July 20th to August 10th. Activity will be on 40/20/15/10 meters SSB and CW, with 100 watts, dipole and groundplane antennas. QSL via his home callsign, direct or by the bureau.

V5, NAMIBIA (African Trip). Nick, G3RWF, will be active as V5/G3RWF starting September 14th for 3 weeks. From Namibia he will travel to South Africa (ZS) for another 3 weeks (possibly including 4-5 days in Lesotho - 7P). He hopes to work more RSARS members from V5 than last time (i.e. total of more than zero!). Nick will be /p from the very north - a few days first near Victoria Falls (Zambia and Botswana and therefore not QRV!). He will then drive west right along the Angolan border and then loop south to Windhoek and thereafter to South Africa (worked 30+ members last time). QSL via his home callsign.

VI9, NORFOLK ISLAND (Pitcairner landing celebrations by Jim Smith, VK9NS). "Although I have lived on Norfolk for almost 26 years and Kirsti many more years neither of us are Norfolk Islanders!! June of this year marks the 150th Anniversary of the landing of the people of Pitcairn Island, the decendants of the Bounty Mutineers, on Norfolk Island.

The discovery of Pitcairn Island with its 'lost' population is a whole saga in itself. The subsequent movement of this population was sanctioned by Queen Victoria. The Britsh government then arranged their transport to, and settlement on, the vacant possession of Norfolk Island.

(Some Pitcairners subsequently wished to return 'home' to Pitcairn. This was allowed and carried out on a one off and final basis. Hence the current Christian and Young, etc., families resident on Pitcairn Island.)

The celebration of this unique migration is special to the Norfolk Islanders (those of Pitcairn descent) and there are many things being planned. It will be an very interesting period.

To help celebrate the event the HIDXA Club has been issued with the special callsigns of VI9NL and VI9NS for the whole month of June covering the period of the celebrations. Kirsti, VK9NL, and myself, VK9NS, will use these special callsigns and will both try to be as active as possible during the period.

For the record, the HIDXA Club was created some 23 years ago after the return from Heard Island, and is registered on Norfolk Island...."
73 Jim, VK9NS

VI9, NORFOLK ISLAND. Bill, VK4FW, informs OPDX that all equipment has now been sent to Norfolk Island in readiness for their arrival of the team on May 24th. The team consists of: Ron/VE7NS, Gary/ZL2IFB, Phil/VK2BAA, Eddie/ VK4AN, Merve/VK4DV, John/VK5PO and Bill/VK4FW. Bill states, "We have been very fortunate to have the use of our special callsign VI9NI. This has been issued to help celebrate the 150th anniversary of the landing of the "HMS Bounty Mutineers." Suggested operating frequencies are:
CW - 1822, 3523, 7023, 10103, 14023, 18073, 21023, 24893, 28023 and 50125
SSB - 1822, 3785, 7093, 14195, 18140, 21295, 24940, 28475 and 50125
RTTY - 10103, 14084, 21084 and 28084 kHz
Bill informs that they will make use of the N1MM logging program which will enable them to keep an eye on all grey line propagation. QSL via VK4FW, by the VK4 QSL Bureau or direct to: PO Box 612, Childers, 4660, Australia (w/ a with minimum of 2 USDs). The team would like to sincerely thank the following for their support: TET EMTRON, CAL-AV LABS, DANISH DX GROUP, VK3AJJ, VK4AN, VK4CY, VK4NEF, VK6NKG, VK4FW and the members of ODXG. As a reminder, the team is still in need of some donations to help offset the huge costs of freighting in the equipment. Further information can be found at: http://odxg.org/expedition.html

VU4, ANDAMAN ISLANDS (Updates/News/QSL Corrections).....
More information was announced this past week about the two new YL operators on VU4-land. These two YLs hold valid India licenses and have permission to transmit from VU4. Operators are Ms. Suraj Moli, VU3VPX, and Ms. Lizzie Dcruz, VU3VPY. No one knows why they got VU3 callsigns instead of VU4 callsigns, but they are legit. Frank, DL4KQ/VU3FRK, who recently returned (May 6th) from Port Blair, stated that "Ms. Molly, VU3VPX, and and Mrs. Lizzy, VU3VPY," are legit VU4 licenses since September of last year. However, the YLs didn't own any equipment beside an old funny straight key. He (Frank) mentioned Doug, N6TQS, immediately decided to donate his SIGMA5 antenna and Frank dropped of his own Elecraft K2/100 with seperate KAT100 antenna tuner, a power supply and a Heil headset. Thanks to Frank, their station is now set up and the YLs can now be active on 20-10 meters (SIGMA5) and on 40 meters with a dipole. (Unfortunately, the noise level at the College is extremely high and Frank recommended to them to look for a better place/building.) Bernie, W3UR, Editor of The Daily, also reported this past week that his group (that was at VU4) was was invited to the "Dr. B.R. Ambedkar Govt. Polytechnic School". They met with the Principal Shri, Utpal Sharma and several other potential hams. In fact a Amateur Radio class will be starting up very soon with 30 students, including the Principal, teachers and students of the school. A radio was promised to the club by an anonymous donor. In fact the rig is currently in Bangkok. An antenna is also being worked on plus other accessories for the club station. Complete details will be released to the DX community soon, maybe even at Dayton.

PLEASE NOTE: The following are corrections/revisied updates to OPDX.758 under "VU4, ANDAMAN ISLANDS (Updates/News)" in the collected QSL routes. The following should read:

QSL VU4AN/VU3KIE via OH2BN. Operator Jorma, OH2KI. Online log available at: http://koti.welho.com/tlinden2/logsearch/vu4logs.html
QSL VU4AN/VU3OHB via OH2BN. Operator Martti, OH2BH. Online log available at: http://koti.welho.com/tlinden2/logsearch/vu4logs.html
QSL VU4AN/VU3PLM via IK1PMR. Operator YL Claudia, K2LEO. Online log available at: http://www.ik1pmr.com/logs/
QSL VU4AN/VU3RWO via N3ST. Operator David, K3LP. Online log available at:http://www.dx-pedition.de/andaman2006/logs.html
QSL VU4AN/VU3TLY via IK1PMR. Operator Andrea, IK1PMR. Online log available at: http://www.ik1pmr.com/logs/

There has been some confusion on the QSL routes. Martti, OH2BH, informed OPDX that OH2BN is the QSL Manager (not OH2BH) for all three stations: VU4AN/VU3KIE, VU4AN/VU3OHA and VU4AN/VU3OHB. Also, John, K1XN, of the GoList, advises that he received a note from David, K3LP, the operator of VU4AN/VU3RWO, and he assures John that N3ST is the ONLY QSL Manager for VU4AN/VU3RWO. As far as stations VU4AN/VU3PLM and VU4AN/VU3TLY, operator Andrea/IK1PMR (alias VU3TLY) announced on one of the DX mailing list that you can send QSLs direct to him for both VU3TLY and VU3PLM. He states, "We're discussing about appointing F5CWU as a group manager, but still it's not clear to me if all team members will agree." OPDX hopes that we were able to clear up some of the QSL confusion.

YO, ROMANIA. Jean Michel, F6AJA, French DX Editor of the Les Nouvelles DX, will once again be active as YO/F6AJA from May 22-28th from YO8FZ's station during my free time.

ZP0, PARAGUAY. Tomas, ZP5AZL, is planning to be active as ZP0R in the CQWW DX SSB Contest (October 28-29th) as a Single-Op entry. QSL via W3HNK. Meanwhile, Jorge, CX6VM, will be active as ZP0R in the CQWW DX CW Contest (November 25-26th) as a Single-Op/All-Band/High-Power entry. Also, QSL via W3HNK.

ZW2, BRAZIL (Update/Correction). Look for ZW2FEN (not ZW4FEN as first reported) to be active during the "FIRST FAIR OF RADIOAMADORISMO OF BRAZIL" (FENARCOM), July 14-16th. Activity will be on all modes and bands. QSL via PY2QI. More information via: erwin@fenarcom.com.br

Interestingly that you post as Not Lloyd and then Lloydie under two

Yeah, I caught bits and pieces of the Net last night. Nothing like it was about 10 years ago, though. I mean, some of the verbal fights between the Net members and the jammers like K5BLB, K5ZU, WA9KJI, W9ART, etc, etc, were hilarious. Some of the more entertaining Net members/jammers either left or died off. I used to really enjoy

Liberty Net is somewhat amusing but that kook Karl up in VE7 land was on all day on 14.275 ranting like a banshee on Sunday the 14th.
Then of course in came Michigan Mike,
Vietnam Dan the Fighting Man, Zipper
Queer from VT, and a dozen or so Un-ID'ed
QRM'ers who turned 14.275 into a COMPLETE NUTHOUSE in very short order, complete with someone playing German Marching Music at one point.

It was like the old '313 of years past and MUCH MORE refreshing than listening to K1MAN spreading mayonaise into the asscrack of 20 Meters and taking a big bite outta the same... :)

Background:
Tired of listening to Led Zepplin or NPR on your I-Pod? Wouldn't you like to be able to carry with you the kinds of ham radio conversations that you listen to while in your radio shack?
Mike, KL7R, in Juneau, Alaska, and Bill, M0HBR, in London, England meet regularly on the ECHOLINK system to discuss their homebrew radio projects. We are making them available as PODCASTS.

NEW RSS FEED: You can subscribe to the program, have them downloaded to your MP-3 player, and listen to them at your convenience. To subscribe, just cut and paste this URL into your I-poder (or similar) software. We've been having trouble with our Ourmedia RSS feed, so Mike (software wizard that he is) has homebrewed his own RSS feed. In order to subscribe to SolderSmoke, point your podcast software to:

Bottom line, dickhead: The Internet is made up of cooperative, mostly private corporations who agree by contract to carry each other's packets. You have no rights on the Internet other than those which the corporations choose to grant. It's called "private enterprise," dickhead, and it's the norm these days. Deal with it.

As to the lolicon cartoons themselves, most people - the dysfunctional Japanese included - find them to be repulsive on several levels. Such sites cause us to question the psychological state of the people who view or who distribute that crap, because we have learned the hard way that those people are bound to include a larger than normal number of sickos who are a danger to our children. The sickos uniformly hide behind legalisms while they continue to abuse and murder our children.

We're fed up with that and believe in an active, preemptive defense against the sickos, including trashing their favorite distribution channels and putting their names into national registries that anyone can access.

So you're on our list, Mr. Sicko, and we're going to keep after you. You and your creepy friends are not going to be allowed to hide behind legalisms while you fantasize about raping babies.

Until you get that shit off the net, we'll hound you wherever you go.

And that's a solemn promise.

"Take the plunge"

*Note: You'll need condoms and a plunger (or something of a similar size and shape) to try this.
First, I take the condom and slip it over the handle on the plunger. If the condom is not very well lubed, then I pour lotion over the tip of it. I stick the plunger to the floor so it doesn't slide anywhere while I'm doin' my business.
I then take my pants off so they won't get in the way and are not stained by the lotion or cum.
With my dick in my hand, slowly stroking, little by little I slide the plunger up my anus. Pushing it as far as I can, I start to jack off. You can try it either with or without lube, it really doesn't matter.
Right before climax (it shouldn't take you very long),
I stop and begin to massage my testicles.
After about 10 seconds, I start back up again.
Repeat this until you can't hold the cum any longer.
Once you reach the point of blowing your load and you can't stop it, just let loose. You might want to be aiming at a toilet bowl or something so you won't spend the following hour cleaning up the far wall.

April 27, 2006:
"A sherrif's deputy in Dolphin County, Pennsylvania was charged last week with sending his neighbor pictures of his penis and appearing naked in her backyard. The Patriot News says that Deputy Anthony Fritz was suspended on March 23rd while an investigation was conducted. He is now charged with stalking, open lewdness, and 2 counts of criminal harrassment. Fritz, who is married, started sending emails that were sexual in nature to a woman who lived nearby in February. The woman chose not to respond and the emails continued to become more and more explicit. Fritz is accused of emailing the woman a photograph of himself holding his penis. The picture was taken with the deputy's cell phone which was also used to send the image on March 4th and 5th. He is accused of sending the woman messages that he was sitting at a picnic table in her backyard naked. On one of those occasions, the woman's brother confronted Fritz in the backyard. He remains suspended without pay."

Well, Buster, it's really a toss up. Ms. Prude got so hot and bothered after finally getting to see a real live dick for the first time in her life she ran right home to put his dick picture on the Internet. Then she got in the tub and had multiple orgasms under the water faucet to calm herself.
As
for the alleged pervert, let's face facts. Anyone who chooses to sit naked while reading an "Archie" comic book kaint be all that bad.

Not Roger but Dicksucking Davies wrote:
> I love

You love whining "Leave me alone" in your lisping girly voice when Oris came to your door, fatty.

I happened to be traveling through Huntsville, Alabama early this morning, I decided to stop in Athens and see just how tough Lloyd Davies was going to act when he saw me in person.

Many of you know that a few years ago, Lloyd got smart with several people in the Deja Newsgroup (now Google) and I issued a challenge to him. I told him I would be attending the Dalton, Ga. Hamfest if he wanted to continue the conversation. He said he would be there and he was going to kick my ass.

Well, Lloyd was a no-show and continued the verbal assault on the newsgroups.
He always talks tough behind his keyboard. And, I understand he is now doing the same sort of thing on the NIM Busters Board.

Well, about 8.35 this morning (December 23, 2004) I located his apartment in a nasty looking section of town. I'm a pretty good sized man, but I put my gun in my back waistband after exiting the car. I located his apartment and knocked on the door. The doorbell was missing and bare wires were sticking out of the wall. I heard someone say I'm coming and shortly the door opened with a safety chain lock still engaged. He asked what I wanted and I introduced myself and asked if we could have a conversation. He turned white as a sheet and attempted to slam the door, but I already had a foot wedged in the opening. He started shaking uncontrollably and was shouting leave me alone, leave me alone!

I told him he didn't seem so tough now face to face and then noticed a putrid odor of urine and he was pissing his pants and crying like a baby. Please leave me alone Oris he said, I was just having fun and meant no harm, please leave, please. I could see the filthy floor of this apartment and the dirty floors and the stench of a grown man pissing on himself were almost enough to make me want to vomit, and I don't have a queasy stomach. Upon telling him that this time he would escape a ass kicking and not to ever get a smart mouth with me again and a verbal yes from him, I departed. That apartment complex looked like a crackhouse, niggers everywhere, filthy grounds and stairwells. Junk cars

everywhere and garbage overflowing the garbage cans.

This Lloyd is nothing more than white trash that delivers pizzas and could afford to take a trip out of town if the ticket cost $5.00.

I'm sending this to a friend who despises Lloyd Davies and he wanted to post it for everyone to see just what kind of chickenshit asshole this Davies really is.

Oris Grimm

No, Lardass, you couldn't find a car big enough to hide your fat queer ass. You'd rather hide behinde your HUD apartment door and whine "leave me alone" like you did when Oris stopped by.

This was e-mailed to me this morning by Oris Grimm an old friend.

I happened to be traveling through Huntsville, Alabama early this morning, I deceided to stop in Athens and see just how tough Lloyd Davies was going to act when he saw me in person.

Many of you know that a few years ago, Lloyd got smart with several people in the Deja Newsgroup (now Google) and I issued a challenge to him. I told him I would be attending the Dalton, Ga. Hamfest if he wanted to continue the conversation. He said he would be there and he was going to kick my ass.

Well, Lloyd was a no-show and continued the verbal assault on the newsgroups. He always talks tough behind his keyboard. And, I understand he is now doing the same sort of thing on the NIM Busters Board.

Well, about 8.35 this morning (December 23, 2004) I located his apartment in a nasty looking section of town. I'm a pretty good sized man, but I put my gun in my back waistband after exiting the car. I located his apartment and knocked on the door. The doorbell was missing and bare wires were sticking out of the wall. I heard someone say I'm coming and shortly the door opened with a safety chain lock still engaged. He asked what I wanted and I introduced myself and asked if we could have a conversation. He turned white as a sheet and attempted to slam the door, but I already had a foot wedged in the opening. He started shaking uncontrollably and was shouting leave me alone, leave me alone! I told him he didn't seem so tough now face to face and then noticed a putrid odor of urine and he was pissing his pants and crying like a baby. Please leave me alone Oris he said, I was just having fun and meant no harm, please leave, please. I could see the filthy floor of this apartment and the dirty floors and the stench of a grown man pissing on himself were almost enough to make me want to vomit, and I don't have a queasy stomach. Upon telling him that this time he would escape a ass kicking and not to ever get a smart mouth with me again and a verbal yes from him, I departed. That apartment complex looked like a crackhouse, niggers everywhere, filthy grounds and stairwells. Junk cars everywhere and garbage overflowing the garbage cans.

This Lloyd is nothing more than white trash that delivers pizzas and could afford to take a trip out of town if the ticket cost $5.00.

I'm sending this to a friend who despises Lloyd Davies and he wanted to post it for everyone to see just what kind of chickenshit asshole this Davies really is.

Frank Zappa - Dancing Fool
(written by: Frank Zappa)

I don't know much about dancin',
That's why I got this song,
One of my legs is shorter than the other,
And both of my feet are too long.
'Course now I'll ride along with them,
I got no natural rythem,
But I go dancing every night,
Hoping one day I might get it right!

I'm a dancing fool (Dancing fool)X3

I hear that beat,
I jump outta my seat,
But I can't compete,
'Cause I'm a.....

Dancing fool (dancing fool)X3

The disco folks all dressed up,
Like life is fit to kill,
I walk on in and I see 'em there,
Gonna give them all a thrill.
When they see me comin',
They all steps aside,
They has a fit while I come in,
My social suicide.

I'm a dancing fool (dancing fool)X3

The beat goes on and on,
And I'm so... (woooaah)
The beat goes on and on,
And I'm so... (woooaah)
The beat goes on and on
And I'm so... (woooaah)

The beat goes on and I'm so wrong,
The beat goes on and I'm so wrong,
The beat goes on and I'm so wrong,
The beat goes on and I'm so wrong,
I may be totally wrong but I'm a...

Dancing fool (dancing fool)

I may be totally wrong but I'm a...

Dancing fool (dancing fool)

Yowzer, yowzer, yowzer,
I got it all together now,
With my very own disco clothes... Hey!
My shirt's half open,
To show you my chain,
And the spoon for up my nose.
I am really something,
That's what you'd probably say,
So smoke your little smoke,
And drink your little drink,
While I dance the night away.
I'm a...

Dancing fool (dancing fool)X4

He's a dancing fool

I may be totally wrong but I'm a...
I may be totally wrong but I'm a...
I may be totally wrong but I'm a...
I may be totally wrong but I'm a...

I may be totally wrong but I'm a fool...yeah

Hey darling, can I buy you a couple of drinks, hmm?
Lookin' for Mr. Goodbar, 'cause here he is.
Wait a minute, I've got it,
You're an Italian.
Ha? You're Jewish?
Oh. love your nails.
You must be a Libra.
To your place or mine?

(laughs)
yes.

Yes...Markie is a dancing fool DANCE MARKIE DANCE!

Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

Make the no-code Tech license one year non-renewable.

This personifies why the Amateur Radio Service has lost an entire generation of new members as well as why the average Ham is aged 62.5 years old.

It also goes far in explaining why fewer Emergency Operations Centers managers look upon Amateur Radio as a viable means of support during an emergency.

This thinking truly puts the "amateur" back into the Amateur Radio Service.

This is a perfect example of viewing the future through your rear-view mirror.

All in favor of that should respond to the relay league with their vote for the continuance of CW as a "filter" ; in spite of the decisions already made during the WRC03.

It has already "filtered" out the expertise of those receiving the most up to date training in digital communications.

Show your level of understanding of the current situation; vote for the continuance of CW as a requirement for the death of the Amateur Radio Service.

You better do it quickly; the ARRL has already announced new testing material being released for exams administered after July 1st, 2006.

Nice troll. (...worthy of the late Polly from 14.313)

It would never REALLY happen you know.

If hams were ever forced to re-test when their license was up for renewal, no doubt WHATSOEVER in my mind that 75% would drop out from Ham radio.

Even the guys on 10 Meter FM working Repeaters and 28.600 simplex what scanner listeners and SWL's monitors tune into would dry up overnight.

Apart from that ARRL only represents 20% of all USA at best. Most people know that they are nothing more than a publishing house which landed a 501C-3 Tax free status via claiming to be a technical resource and training NGO org. What a load of sheer bullshi++ery.

Arrl could go belly up tomorrow and it wouldn't be worth a cup of coffee with Habib Patel at the local Dunkin Donuts.

Actually there are NO automatic renewals now. You must apply for the renewal. There's really no need to retest.

Why? It's been 74% as far back as I can remember.

The original code test back in the earliest days of licensing was only 5wpm.
It would be nice to have the 13wpm as a requirement since that's the speed at which most people can't count the dits and dahs but those who use it will get past that anyway. The 20wpm was only icing on the cake so don't see a real need for it. Those who get to the 13wpm will get to the 20wpm if they use it much. Although I advocate keeping code testing, we need not reinstate the 20wpm in my opinion.

Pointless change. Many people don't gain enough experience or get together enough of a station in a year to know if they want to continue.

Frank Zappa - Dancing Fool
(written by: Frank Zappa)

I don't know much about dancin',
That's why I got this song,
One of my legs is shorter than the other,
And both of my feet are too long.
'Course now I'll ride along with them,
I got no natural rythem,
But I go dancing every night,
Hoping one day I might get it right!

I'm a dancing fool (Dancing fool)X3

I hear that beat,
I jump outta my seat,
But I can't compete,
'Cause I'm a.....

Dancing fool (dancing fool)X3

The disco folks all dressed up,
Like life is fit to kill,
I walk on in and I see 'em there,
Gonna give them all a thrill.
When they see me comin',
They all steps aside,
They has a fit while I come in,
My social suicide.

I'm a dancing fool (dancing fool)X3

The beat goes on and on,
And I'm so... (woooaah)
The beat goes on and on,
And I'm so... (woooaah)
The beat goes on and on
And I'm so... (woooaah)

The beat goes on and I'm so wrong,
The beat goes on and I'm so wrong,
The beat goes on and I'm so wrong,
The beat goes on and I'm so wrong,

I may be totally wrong but I'm a...

Dancing fool (dancing fool)

I may be totally wrong but I'm a...

Dancing fool (dancing fool)

Yowzer, yowzer, yowzer,
I got it all together now,
With my very own disco clothes... Hey!
My shirt's half open,
To show you my chain,
And the spoon for up my nose.
I am really something,
That's what you'd probably say,
So smoke your little smoke,
And drink your little drink,
While I dance the night away.
I'm a...

Dancing fool (dancing fool)X4

He's a dancing fool

I may be totally wrong but I'm a...
I may be totally wrong but I'm a...
I may be totally wrong but I'm a...

I may be totally wrong but I'm a fool...yeah

Hey darling, can I buy you a couple of drinks, hmm?
Lookin' for Mr. Goodbar, 'cause here he is.
Wait a minute, I've got it,
You're an Italian.
Ha? You're Jewish?
Oh. love your nails.

In case there is ANYBODY out there not realizing this yet:

Here's how it works:

A post will go as follows:

"The ARRL is a Nazi (or insert Liberal or Gay, or whatever) and all Techs (or Extras or...)should be shot. AND I SUPPORT IT!!!"

Now the poster sits back and thoroughly enjoys watching the newsgroup fill with verbal dung, back and forth.

If this is what you want, by all means respond to the poster.

If, on the other hand, you prefer ham newsgroups to be primarily there to discuss amateur radio matters in a reasonable and informative forum, then

DON'T RESPOND!

Eventually, the asswipes will find some other lucrative market for their "fun".

Your statement is factually incorrect regarding equalization, though the factors you mentioned certainly do affect sound quality and I do not disparage them.

All AM stations use _at least_ the required NRSC equalization, and virtually all broadcast stations, AM, FM, or TV, use multiband audio processing, which is in itself a kind of adaptive, dynamic equalization.

I just applied those techniques, suitably refined for a narrower bandwidth, to my amateur radio station, after modifying my gear to remove the somewhat ham-handed attempts of the manufacturers to shape the audio.

With all good wishes,

There's an NRSC ''Mask'' which is used to keep the sidebands within limits but no requirement to use any preemphasis, unlike the FM standards.

"glorius" - Mongolloyd make "glorious" FUCK UP!
"weekened" - Mongolloyd's "weekend" consists of getting drunk and whining about another man! That is, between delivering pizzas.
"Woger mkae" - "Roger make"s Mongolloyd look like a fool, time and time again!
"noddle" - Lardass your little "noodle" of a dick is like a fucking shard of thin spaghetti!
"usae" - Mongolloyd never "use"s any fucking sense or correct spelling.
"I ambored" - Mongolloyd, you are an idiot as well!

I am far more educated than you will ever be. I have what is called freestanding intellegence. An IQ test showed me that I am just a few points

If your IQ was of the stature of a genius, you would at least be able to spell "intelligence" and in your case you misspelled it "intellegence" Perhaps it was a slip and an honest mistake but I would suspect you would proofread your post especially when bragging.

Hahahha. A fifty year old guy who lived with his momma from age 40 till she passed on a few years ago. Calling anyone a loser. Hahahaha. Not to mention the multitude of jobs you have held over these past few years. The only thing you've changed more than jobs, is all of the ISPs you have changed. By the way hot shot, what is that so-called degree you possess?

Scheissman still hasn't passed spelling class. Look at the title. You're so unoriginal and dull. Perhaps that explains why women run away from you, bwhahahahaha. That or is it the nasty teeth and pimply pock marked face. Scheissman acts proud of his past which is hardly that of a reasonably successful adult. He's mad at the world because his path in life was to be a total failure and a waste. How sad.

No, but we know who you are and what you stand for. Well it's not as if you stand for very much being the low lying piece of fruit you are.
However, we do recognize that lead poisoning was very prevalent during your upbringing. Especially in the run down projects of Hillsbourough County FL.

I guess when a guy lives with his mommy then he could have a pretty decent car. After all it wasn't as if he would have been paying any bills. Even a welfare boy could do better.

You wouldn't know what a job is anyway. It's doubtful a guy who posts at 9 am in the morning regularly actually has a paying job. Unless he is working the late shift at the Taco.

Leave it to Lardass to bring up a subject not in the post. Find a new unskilled labor job yet, fired pizza BOY?

Wrong again, Lardass. Roger's worked the same job for years, it's not his fault you had to work in unskilled labor all your life. And you just got fired from your pizza BOY job, didn;'t you, the only job you are qualifi\ed to do. P.S. It wasn't GMAC, he never worked there to begin with, you are too stupid to find out where he does work.

Get to looking for a job, LOSER!

Lardass Davies whined
<IKYABWAI>

Poor Lardass, according to his neighbors his chest looks like a festering zit patch and cratered like the moon.

BILLY, DON'T BE A ZERO

Vocal: Bo Donaldson & The Heywoods

[Words and Music by Mitch Murray and Peter Robin Callander]

The gay pride band came down along Main Street
The Village People fell in behind
I looked across and there I saw Billy Smith Waiting to go and join the line
And with her head upon his shoulder
Mary, his old and hideous she-male mommy
>From where I stood, I saw she was cryin'
And through her tears I heard her say

"Billy, don't be a zero, don't be a fool all your life"
"Billy, don't be a zero, you can go back to school at night"
And as he started to go she said "Billy, keep your your head back as you blo-o-ow"
"Billy, don't be a zero, don't forget we can give 'em a two for one you know"

The whining faggots were trapped in a alley
The gay orgy raging all around Dick Sergeant cried "We've got to hang on, boys"
"We got to hold this piece a'ground"
"I need a volunteer to ride me"
"And bring us back some extra men"
And Billy Smith's hand was up in a moment
Forgettin' all the words she said

Everybody said
"Billy, don't be a zero, don't be a fool all your life"
"Billy, don't be a hero, you can go back to school at night"
And as he started to go she said "Billy, keep your head back as you blo-o-ow"
"Billy, don't be a hero, don't forget we can give 'em a two for one you know"

I heard his she-male mommy got a letter
That told how Billy swallowed that day
The letter said that he was a zero
She should be proud he swallowed that way
I heard she threw that letter away

[military drums and fifes to end]

Perhaps "efficient" is the wrong word.

In my experience, it is quite difficult to send distinguishable Morse dots and dashes without a key (YMMV). Doing so by keying a mic or touching wires together thus becomes very slow - slower even than tap code. Also, it takes considerable effort to learn Morse and even more practice to copy all the less than perfect fists out there. Thus the number of operators and potential listeners who can copy such a 'bad fist' are few now and are rapidly vanishing now that Morse is strictly a hobby mode. OTOH, everybody who read my post now knows tap code - which is common in prisons, mines and other places because anybody can copy it with little or no practice.

I'm not suggesting that anybody eschew Morse if they enjoy it - just that they stick tap code into the back of their minds for emergencies.

You posess a dalek doll up your fat ass, Lardass. You don't have a job now that you were fired from Papa John's (you couldn't even hold on to a loser pizza BOY job), you get drunk all the time, and you certainly don't have a girlfriend, save those dalek dolls. You certainly don't have any education either, Davies, and your middle name is Austin. What a pansy-ass name. You have to live in a HUD apartment with the rent way past due and you can't evn pay your own bills with yout mommy's help.

Poor Lardass, still whining like the cunt you always will be. You should be out looking for a job, loser, instead of sitting on your fat ass whining on the internet, fired pizza BOY. Some people called the Athens, Papa John's and found out you were indeed fired, Davies.

It took a phone call, plus several email messages, but we finally got CTITECH to remove N9OGL's internet access. His cartoon kiddy porn is now history.

We are currently after three other US sites which contain the same kind of cartoon kiddy porn, and one of them (a California site) has now attempted to go underground. In other words, they are on the run like the sicko cowards they are, but they won't be able to hide.

I won't give the URL of any of those sites, because I don't want them to receive any free advertising. My friends and I will continue to fight the good fight against cartoon kiddy porn and other net abuses. If you want to lend a hand, join us in the chat room at any Friday night at approximately 22:00 hrs EDT

Sure you are DeBitchwhore, sure you are...crawl back under that fat man you've been fucking, that's where you fucking belong you AID'S RIDDEN DUMB FUCK!!!

Good point. It is true that the original Morse code was merely clicks and spaces on wired telegraph systems, similar to the tap method you suggest. I see the advantage that by tapping slowly, anyone who knows the scheme can copy. This is also true of Morse, of course.

Nah, there's a couple nice campgrounds near Dayton but they're down the road a piece. Some of them run shuttle vans back and fourth.

Yup, I hear that often, which is why I've had modest success with Jerry Ziliak tapes. He sends at a character speed of 21 WPM, so each letter almost becomes a single sound. Although that hasn't helped me much, thanks for the thought.

Oh, yeah!!!! I am into packet and APRS, into building antennas for myself & for the RACES stations and into teaching. Here in the West, we have something called the Western Intertie Network System or "Win System" http://www.winsystem.org/ which is loads of fun. It also has IRLP, so I've chatted with guys all over the world with it.

I did HF PSK31 under the club license during FD a few years ago. Great fun.

I've became an ET in 1962 (USN) and liked it well enough to stick around for 21 years. I became an engineer in 1989 (thank you, GI Bill), so I know my way around the 'trons. I've only been a ham since 1992.

Poor delusional Llardass!

I happened to be traveling through Huntsville, Alabama early this morning, I deceided to stop in Athens and see just how tough Lloyd

Davies was going to act when he saw me in person.

Many of you know that a few years ago, Lloyd got smart with several people in the Deja Newsgroup (now Google) and I issued a challenge to him. I told him I would be attending the Dalton, Ga. Hamfest if he wanted to continue the conversation. He said he would be there and he was going to kick my ass.

Well, Lloyd was a no-show and continued the verbal assault on the newsgroups. He always talks tough behind his keyboard. And, I understand he is now doing the same sort of thing on the NIM Busters Board.

Well, about 8.35 this morning (December 23, 2004) I located his apartment in a nasty looking section of town. I'm a pretty good sized man, but I put my gun in my back waistband after exiting the car. I located his apartment and knocked on the door. The doorbell was missing and bare wires were sticking out of the wall. I heard someone say I'm coming and shortly the door opened with a safety chain lock still engaged. He asked what I wanted and I introduced myself and asked if we could have a conversation. He turned white as a sheet and attempted to slam the door, but I already had a foot wedged in the opening. He started shaking uncontrollably and was shouting leave me alone, leave me alone! I told him he didn't seem so tough now face to face and then noticed a putrid odor of urine and he was pissing his pants and crying like a baby. Please leave me alone Oris he said, I was just having fun and meant no harm, please leave, please. I could see the filthy floor of this apartment and the dirty floors and the stench of a grown man pissing on himself were almost enough to make me want to vomit, and I don't have a queasy stomach. Upon telling him that this time he would escape a ass kicking and not to ever get a smart mouth with me again and a verbal yes from him, I departed. That apartment complex looked like a crackhouse, niggers everywhere, filthy grounds and stairwells. Junk cars everywhere and garbage overflowing the garbage cans.

This Lloyd is nothing more than white trash that delivers pizzas and could afford to take a trip out of town if the ticket cost $5.00.

I'm sending this to a friend who despises Lloyd Davies and he wanted to post it for everyone to see just what kind of chickenshit asshole this Davies really is.

Watch all the obese BEER BELLY'ed hams waddle on by in the parking lot flea market at the Hara Arena.

CLICKINZIE HERE: http://wa5kub.com

The camera was in operation today (Friday) and it's 2000% proof positive what the FDA has said all along about the rampant obesity epidemic in America.
(makes you wonder how many Big-Macs they sell this weekend especially in and around Dayton)

There is also an OPEN CHAT ROOM on the site where you can comment on the goings on. Almost as much fun as being there live.

Trust me folks, you'll see more middle-aged pathetic looking white men than anywhere else, possibly except being the local model train show or the next NASCAR event.

It took a phone call, plus several email messages, but we finally got CTITECH to remove N9OGL's internet access. His cartoon kiddy porn is now history.

We are currently after three other US sites which contain the same kind of cartoon kiddy porn, and one of them (a California site) has now attempted to go underground. In other words, they are on the run like the sicko cowards they are, but they won't be able to hide.

I won't give the URL of any of those sites, because I don't want them to receive any free advertising. My friends and I will continue to fight the good fight against cartoon kiddy porn and other net abuses. If you want to lend a hand, join us in the chat room at

http://www.nimbusters.com

any Friday night at approximately 22:00 hrs EDT.

Sure you are you fucking freak!!

Look at this group of misfits. I mean, LOOK at it. What do you have? One or two Hams who have something of value to say versus ten or twelve social misfits with nothing to say?

You have complete Idiots babbling on and on about nothing, saying nothing, but repeating the same, tired and worn third grade comments about each other.

Mark cannot construct a cohesive sentence, and makes no sense while Wiseman wannabe's emulate this cowardly loser from West Virginia.

Mark "sees" Dave in each post, sees Dave in the shadows, around every corner, and cannot get past his fixation.

Wiseman, like Mark, "sees" Lloyd in each and every post and, like Mark, is unnaturally fixated on his stalkee.

Wiseman, it has been said, is a social misfit with no redeeming values. We know that.

Mark, like Wiseman, is but two steps behind and, like Wiseman, has little going for himself.

(note: Wiseman and Mark know not how to use a spell check program)

Poor Woger. 30, 40, or 50 posts a day?

No life, no friends, no nothing save for a half dozen dialup accounts.

And then they compress the hell out of it, and for AM overmodulate the peaks for CB-style range enhancement. :)

Man did you ever call that one right on the head !!

I also watched the HamventionCam today and I ain't seen so many big beer gutz floppin over the St Paddy's Day party at the local Am Legion Hall.

You gotta think how those guys manage to True, but I must have counted close to 40 (fourty) morbidly obese hams seated in those motorized Scooters that I saw zipping by the HamventionCam today.

Many of them stopped for the camera, got up mugged
4 the camera, then hopped back on and zipped away.
(funniest was the guy pulling a red wagon behind his Scooter that had a couple of big astron power supplies in it.
Guess he needed one to re-charge the battery ? (grin)

No need to create one. One already exists. What you see below are true and actual misspellings taken from Scheissman's posts over the last two years. Of course, Billy, we've most surely missed more than we gathered since it is nearly impossible to keep track of his thousands upon thousands of posts. After this list was published a time or two, Woger imitated it (no originality there) and posted alleged misspellings attributed to his favorite stalkee, Lloyd Davies.
One can use many descriptors to define Woger, but "creativity" and "originality" will never fall within these parameters. Below is his Dickshunary. Have fun with it.

You mean the guy from Ypsilanti? I HOPE he does come on.
He's a true loon that's 2 cans short of a six-pack. Great fun to listen to fer sure!!

Joke time for the kids:

A tourist walks into a curio shop in San Francisco. Looking around at everything, he notices a very lifelike life-sized bronze statue of a rat. It has no price tag, but is so striking that he decides he must have it.

He takes it to the owner and asks, "How much for the bronze rat?" The owner replies, "$12 for the rat and $100 for the story".

The tourist gives the man $12 and says, "I'll just take the rat, you can keep the story."

As he walks down the street carrying his bronze rat, he notices that a few real rats have crawled out of the alleys and sewers and begun following him down the street.

This is disconcerting, and he e begins walking faster. But within a couple of blocks, the herd of rats behind him has grown to hundreds, and they begin squealing. He begins to trot toward the Bay, looking around to see that the rats now number in the MILLIONS, and are squealing and coming toward him faster and faster.

Concerned, even scared, he runs to the edge of the Bay, and throws the bronze rat as far out into the water as he can. Amazingly, the millions of rats all jump into the Bay after it and are all drowned.

The man walks back to the curio shop. "Ah ha," says the owner, "you have come back for the story?"

"No," says the man, "I came back to see if you have a bronze Mexican, a bronze Muslim cleric, a bronze Republican & anything French.

I was there for 4 hours on Saturday.
Nothing but old test equipment and computer junk.
Only reason to go anymore is to meet people, albeit an expensive one. Never again will I goto Dayton.
It's day has ended, period. E-Bay and private ad's on places like QRZ.com have killed it. Not worth the effort anymore.

The last time I was at dayton was 1987, and it sounds like it hasn't changed. It was always a place to find parts and equipment. In the early '80s it had a couple years where it was mostly C-band sat TV equipment, parts and kits. In the '70s it was mostly military surplus and half finished assemblies, along with older tube type ham equipment. What you find depends a lot on the economy, If its been good for a while, there is more good used equipment. Also, the newer radios fail a lot faster, so less make it to the used market. Some of the mail order dealers don't have any real inventory, so they have nothing to take to hamfests because they ship fill their orders as fast as their stock comes in.

I have only been to Dayton once and found it interesting. If I was within 200 miles I would probably go there every year but being on the other side of the country once will have to do. The Flea Market is nice but that cannot be the only reason for one to go to Dayton. There are numerous other activities going on all the time and I believe if one goes to Dayton they should make them the main priority instead of the Flea Market. Almost anything can be bought online nowadays so to go to Dayton to haul home a car full of junk just doesn't make since anymore.
So how about a Dayton without a Flea Market ? Are we all so much into the Junk of our Hobby that we forgot the human element?

Just my two cent worth.

Well, its a 2000 mile round trip these days so I simply can't go. I did go almost every year from 1970 to 1987, when it was a little over an hour's drive. I bought tools, parts, manuals, databooks, test equipment and things I couldn't find at any of the local distributors or surplus dealers. I made the circuit inside to talk to Motorola and several dealers, but 95% of my time was spent going through the flea market. I could by new parts for 10 to 205 of what they would cost from a local dealer, so I would buy a lot of my inventory for the year, if the price was right. Where else would you buy a pair of new enclosed racks worth more than $1200 for $75 from a company that had just gone out of business, or a nice scope for $5 in those days?

I used to go many years ago when CP/M computer were just on the edge of being overtaken by DOS v.1; they had a LOT of good stuff then, but that was before ebay, etc. too . . .

Saturday is the worst day to attend Dayton. With all hamfests, the best deals are either sold during dealer setup before the hamfest or during the first few minutes the hamfest opens. Some folks who don't intend to sell buy vendor passes to shop early. If you attend hamfests to buy and you can't be there when the doors open, you might as well stay home.

Well run hamfests do have good deals that rival or beat Ebay hands down. I usually come home from good hamfests with an item or two that made my trip worthwhile. Then there's hamfests held year after year in the same poor rut that makes you wonder why the sponsors even bother...

Once upon a time, one could talk with designers/engineers and find some useful bargains. It was interesting and much anticipated in spite of the pain every year to find a room. The attendees were of all ages.
A couple of years ago, my EE department thought to have a booth with an eye to student recruitment. Head of the department has kin in Dayton and attended when visiting. He concluded that a booth made no sense. Looking at the pictures of this year's attendees makes it clear that he was right.
Dayton's time has come and gone. A shame.

Actually Ebay didn't kill the Dayton Hamfest. In the 1980's it was being handled as though it was still the 1950's and full of stuff that had been carted between too many hamfests. Dayton is dying because the promoters made the conscious decision to do nothing.

I remember it when people came from all over the world to the dayton hamfest to see the new product releases. A lot of manufacturers unveiled their latest radios and accessories there, every year. I also met the founders of a lot of small manufacturing companies at the mini trade show that was inside Hara Sports Arena. There was an sheik from Saudi Arabia who flew in every year in a private jet. He was followed around by his staff as he talked to different manufacturers and bought multiples of anything that caught his eye, while the staff paid in cash for the orders and arranged for anything that was in stock to be trucked to the Dayton International Airport.

Today the Flea at Dayton is less than 1/3 full .. where up until about 2000 you had to have someone die and will you a flea market space to get into the place... too many of us tired of the "Aisle Police" and the "Tent Police" and the "Door Police" and the Trotwood Firedept won't let us do this and that and the other thing... plus the hotels jacking the rates of 40 to 60 buck rooms up to 150 a nite with 3 might miniumum...
Sorry but this was my 2nd year NOT to attend...

Well, that pretty well kills off the casual attendees that are essential to bring fresh blood into the event.

And although the $25 might not put off the hardcore hamfester it does put off a lot of the 'regular' people that are the foundation of the event. Add $3 gallon for gas for a guy from Indiana who has a few radios to sell and doesn't care if he makes a buck or not on the radio but now he's out of pocket some actual cash money. Much more than taking the family to a movie and buying popcorn!
C'est la vie.
I think a lot of these hamfest promoters figger on pricing themselves as some sort of 'event' rather than just a big swap meet. It doesn't seem to work that way anymore.

It's midnight at Barksdale Air Force Base. Ten fully-loaded B-52 heavy bombers rumble down the runway and ascend into the humid Louisiana sky. Their deafening roar shatters the peaceful night. Soon they will be high over their targets on the Mexican side of the border where they will unload their generous gift of 750-pound iron bombs on the unsuspecting Mexican cucaracha trying to sneak across the border under the cover of dakness.

168 illegal Mexican immigrants carefully and stealthily advance towards the border 86 miles southeast of El Paso. It is pitch black, and the desert is peacefully silent except for the crickets. Only 1 kilometer to go and they will be in the USA. Their spirits couldn't be higher. Suddenly, the night turns into hell on earth. BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM ..... The ground shakes uncontrollably. The sky turns bright red and yellow as explosions surround them. The mighty B-52s, flying too high to be seen or heard, rain their steel death down on the invading scum. The illegals run around in panic and confusion, shitting their pants and not knowing where to go or what to do. Their fear is short-lived. BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM BOOM. Direct hit. Nothing much remains of them. Mission accomplished.

Tonight is the 5th night of Operation Alamo, the wide-scale carpet bombing of the Mexican side of the border ordered by the new American president who came out of virtually nowhere in 2008 to win a landslide election over his Republican and Democrat opponents. White America's bloodless revolution against the do-nothing, minority-coddling, illegal immigrant-coddling Republican and Democrat parties took the whole world by surprise. Finally, after 50 years, White Americans again have a government that actually represents them and is eager to do the will of the people.

While exact target planning methods are classified, we do know that the targets and bombing schedules are selected to achieve maximum surprise and results. Illegal immigration has already slowed down significantly, and some areas of extreme northern Mexico are nothing but craters. When Mexico protested, the president told them the bombing will continue until Mexico stops invading the USA.

Meanwhile, all illegal immigrants are being rounded up and deported, at gunpoint if necessary. U.S. citizens have also been empowered to make citizen's arrest of illegal aliens. The president's approval rating is 93%. The future looks rosy.

The number of new products released tells it all. Whats new, absolutely nothing.

The worst part is the price of all this old junk, some people think buying old junk should cost more than gold nuggets or close to new prices. Collins mania must have spread into old junk parts. Amps parts especially!

The biggest joke was RF parts like vacuum variables, "what you want $200 a piece with no warranty! Same comments apply to tubes. You might as well buy new or from one of the reputable dealers who will give your money back if its a dud.

But what do you expect from a retard that was sent to the nut house for beating up his 73 year old mother?

That was at the door. If you pre-purchased, it was $20. Is that a lot of money for what is still the largest hamfest on the planet? I was there this year, and the place got picked over quickly. I'm sure there was little left by Saturday. I brought 3 radios to put on my brother's table, and they were all sold within 2 hours for more than I would ever have gotten at any of our local radio meets. So,for me anyway, while it may not be what it was compared to previous years (what radio meet is?) I still find Dayton a lot of fun, and well worth attending. Blame eBay if you like, but the fact is that there is very little new blood coming into the hobby, and the old blood, is-well-getting older.

Sure!!

HamComm charges $10 admission, like Dayton charges $25 a head to get in. Their pricing themselves clear out of the market! Then add in the price of gas and food and is it any wonder why hams are staying home and ordering their radios onlive via e-Bay or elsewhere ??

It's actually cheaper to go see a Major League Baseball game live admission than it is to go to a stupid Hamfest.

Do the $$$ homework boys - you guys that run these ham events are screwin yerselves faster than Barbaro broke his leg last week.

After having spent a couple mos attending local AR sponsored swap meets, I figure the "doors open" buyers are there to score deals they can turn around and put on ebay.

And the "they" is not always the involved ARC. A local club here got kicked to the curb by the local community college and now have to stage their long running monthly swap meet at the rodeo grounds in a dirt parking lot. That killed off most of the computer vendors and literally cut the size in half.

1297. Ebay & "The Market"

After reading all this, and with the recent Kutztown event in the background, as well as my three weekend finds, I am not so sure eBay has much to do with anything as to radio prices or availability. This is based on several assumptions which I will list for correction/addition/amplification:

a) the west, southwest and south in general suffer from a dearth of good radios. This has been the case for the over 20 years I have been in the hobby and remains the case today. Exceptions include Florida & Maryland... stretch to make MD a 'southern' state although it is below the Mason/Dixon line.
b) the Pacific northwest suffers from the same lack to a lesser degree.

With this in mind, eBay has always been a presence in areas where the natural crop is limited or non-existent. This group will typically have a view of radios that is wildly distorted in price, as they start with the "everything costs $15" mentality based on shipping alone.

As one moves east especially into (former) wealthier parts of it, and around older major cities (Chicago, Minneapolis, Detroit and so forth), radios become thicker and thicker until one hits the East Coast, where even the most limited multi-family garage sale will offer a few examples of something loosely described as being related to the hobby. Then, at Kutztown, the typical $30+shipping eBay brown bakelite radio goes in the $15-if-that range at the end-of-meet auction. And the $229-for-a-common-RCA (albeit polished to glow-in-the-dark proportions) simply does not happen.

So, it is "all according to" location and opportunity. Kutztown is a free-to-the-public event held at a major Farmers' Market/Antique Market that also has weekly tables for anyone selling. Accordingly its attendance is disproportionately large and consists of a disproportionate amount of the "general public" walking through out of curiosity and because they were 'there anyway'. This would not happen at a destination-event if only because of the lack of general publicity as much as the uninterested public would never go nor have any reason to even be proximate that they might go. And, of course, the admission fee would deter those few that did happen to be straggling nearby.

I will also state for the record that Kutztown had _at least_ thousands of radios in all states, of all types and in all price ranges, from high-end, high-tube-count consoles through lovingly restored tabletops through standard junk. The peripheral events are limited... no hotel-banquet-hall lectures, but those few were directly on-point and even of interest to non-radio people (The talk on Crystal sets, for example).

So, from purely anecdotal evidence, it appears that those venues where the general public is not actively solicited, those venues that are 'preaching to the converted' are shrinking. Those that do solicit the general public, those that run at (apparently) a much lower key appear to be growing. The two local examples would be the DVHRC-sponsored events (Kutztown, PA) and the NJARC-sponsored events (Hazelet, NJ). Those of you that go to the NEARC events in Nashua, New Hampshire... how are they doing? I hear from some acquaintances that they are doing quite well? And I also hear that Rochester is a mere shadow of its former self? Is this true?

In any case, I remain of the general belief that eBay is not a significant factor in the hobby to those in the east. And to those in the west or out-of-range of large, older population centers, it has _always_ been a factor, neither more nor less much than now.

The thoughts of others are actively solicited!

1298. Hamvention: Amateur Radio Manufacturers and Unfair Pricing...

Amateur Radio Manufacturers and unfair pricing!

Here I sit the day after Dayton, calling around to all the dealers looking for a HF Transceiver. There were some fantastic prices offered on equipment (As much as $500 off list), and the dealers are back to charging full price today.

I am told by the dealers I called, that the Manufacturers were making deals with them so they could sell there inventories much cheaper, and the orders had to be taken at Dayton. Today, the day after when most of these orders had not even shipped yet, they are back up to full retail price.

To be fair, Manufacturers should allow these prices for a time period after Dayton to give other Amateurs who could not drive to Dayton an opportunity to get the same deals.

I think we should all write to them and let them know how we feel. This is unfair !

According to the snowbirds from the New England area, Florida is the

So, you're saying that the price hasn't changed that much since I left good points.

The local flea markets here, always seem so barren of good stuff. So I managed to get to one 35 minutes before official opening time.

I was surpised to see the smart buyers already walking out with boxes full of all the good stuff !

The best items sell, as the spots are still being set up.

Cry us a river. They made the offers at Dayton and that was what they as private businesses chose to do. You could have either went to Dayton or found whatever way to get a radio from there. Get over it.

Parking lots were full, there wasn't a hotel vacancy anywhere, etc.

As a rank newbie (not even licensed, yet) I more or less have to agree. Here in the San Francisco Bay Area (SFBA) where there are at least a couple local ARC swap meets per month, I see none of the stuff found on ebay in the way of classic old ham equipment. Hell, I can't even find a used morse code key to practice on. I'm gonna hafta buy a new Ameco from HRO. Not quite sure exactly why this is. Perhaps most of SFBA ppl are all digitally oriented due to Silicon Valley being the original hot-bed of digital. Whatever the reason, old Collins, Drake, Heathkit, etc, rigs are rarer than cheap gas and low real estate prices.

On the positive side of the ledger, due to the glory days of the late great SV, there's hardly a man or woman alive in Northern California that can't fly a Fluke or wield a mean Weller. I'll be flogging my own acid-free flux and have already bought my first QRP kit with my eye on another.

I was curious about the way it was run so I talked to the group that organized the event every year. You wouldn't believe the crap they have to wade through to run a hamfest that size, even though the money raised is used to provide emergency communications for the area.

I have to agree. I got to Dayton last year shortly after the opening, and there were already some R5000's and some beautiful old Hallicrafters that already had "sold" tags on them.

I've gone 5 of the past 6 years.
4 years ago there was a tent full of old AS/400 CPUs.
Less of that this year. Still, a lot of junk every year.
People wanting high-dollar for very-worn equipment.
That was disappointing.

What gets me is the guys selling bootleg MS software for big bucks.
Illegal as all get-out.
But tolerated, apparently, by HamVention.
They could get in big trouble.
That would be sad.

But it's not the only way that the WWW has changed Dayton.
It's changed the whole of communication.
Repeater/IP connections may be nifty, but they're not radio.

Maybe it has something to do with the number of people hit by a car or truck, and the number of other accidents they cause when they step out in front of a moving vehicle. I've seen quite a few wrecks going to, and leaving large hamfests that could have been avoided by keeping foot traffic away from the vehicular traffic.

Internet based sales have a huge advantage over in-place sales like Dayton. Ebay and other sales sites can as we all know bring sellers from around the world at any time of the day. It just isn't possible to get that kind of coverage at an arena in Ohio.

To the extent that buyer and seller are honest (and most are) internet sales work very well because money and the good to be sold have to be moved only once.

It is for the exact same reason that in-person antique shows are having a hard go of it.

THAT is the single largest obstacle to these events. It is not simply a matter of finding a vacant bit of ground and throwing up a few signs.
In this lawsuit-happy society, there is Insurance (liability, property, fire, and so forth), staffing, cleaning, trash-removal, contacting food vendors (and verifying their insurance) and much, much more. Is whatever equipment you are providing also insured? What about any electrical devices? Fences? Guide ropes? ADA compliant? Sufficient facilities? Will food be served? Are they insured? Licensed in that township? Board-of-Health certificates? What about the servers? Any contraband/knock-offs/unlicensed material being sold? Sales tax collected?

And so forth. Not small. My wife's church (a very small one) carries a $1,000,000 policy on any internal events held by non-church groups
AND they insist that these groups also carry a specific policy for the event.

So it is not just collecting table-fees and admission-fees.

I still think that closed-ended events for dedicated hobbyists are bad ideas anyway, but I am not unsympathetic to the complications involved.

But in some ways, Dayton may be an exception, or at least one of a handful of exceptions.

Dayton is big because it draws people, not just from the local area but from far away. Costs go up as size goes up. I'm willing to accept that some hamfests are "insider" events.

But you're right that hamfests should be used as a recruitment tool, and certainly the smaller they get the more their survival requires a wider swatch of the population.

The local hamfests here in Montreal do not publicize outside of ham circles. At least, I don't see it and if I didn't know about the ham clubs and the hamfests I'd not know that they were happening. For most of a decade, I've at least posted to the local buy and sell newsgroup when one of the hamfests is about to happen, and less regularly I post about the others. I'm not sellng the hamfest, but trying to get the word out.

I give the details, but also a spiel because I'm aware that people who don't know need to be informed. I make the point that visiting is a way of finding out about amateur radio, and that the hamfest can be a valuable resource for non-ham. Shortwave listeners may find things of interest, the electronic hobbyist will find things, and of course in recent years computer types may find things.

And while few will see the message, relative speaking, it may be the only time most of the readers see a mention of amateur radio in that year. The way I see it, it's not just about selling tickets to the hamfest, but it's an excuse to get amateur radio out into the world.

When I was a kid, I found out about the hobby because there was an article in a general purpose magazine. I found out that the rules were about to change to allow people under fifteen to get licenses in the local paper. But that sort of thing happens less and less. At the very least, some promotion of the hamfest is a means of letting new people see something about the hobby, and maybe pursuing it further.

And sustainability is a factor. The biggest of the local hamfests is fairly small. SOme years back, one had to cancel because they'd not sold enough tables ahead of time, the next year they came back in a much smaller space that doesn't allow for growth. Had they been promoting the fleamarket outside ham circles ahead of time, they could have attracted "fellow travellers", the SWLs and the electronic hobbyists and even the computer types, to fill the empty tables.

Dumb, dumb dumb dumb ... (Old "Dragnet" theme)

One huge factor driving illegal immigration is the sad state of the Mexican economy -- terrible problems with low wages and high unemployment rates created in part, at least, by NAFTA and by economic "globalization," courtesy of Bill Clinton and George W. Bush.

So if your imaginary US president did, in fact, bomb the Mexican side of the border, what would be one big side effect?

It would further wreck the Mexican economy, wouldn't it?

And that would leave millions of Mexicans with no good way to survive -- except by trying to cross the border into the United States. Despite all the obvious dangers.

And of course, if American employers continued to want to hire illegal immigrants -- for agricultural work, for hotel and restaurant jobs, and for low-paying factory jobs, where people are expected to put up with terrible working conditions and bad wages -- if US employers continued to want to make use of cheap illegal labor that can't fight back, and can't demand its rights for fear of being deported - the current heavy flow of immigrants would likely continue.

So bombing along the border is basically stupid. It just feeds the angry fantasies of people who are deeply upset about immigration and feel helpless to stop it any other way. It's the "Columbine" solution -- or non-solution -- to a problem that needs to be cured another way.

I'm not a conservative, but I sympathize a lot with US citizens living along the borders who want illegal immigration to stop.

But when are anti-immigrant forces in this country going to tackle the roots of the problem -- namely, greedy US employers who hire illegals, and greedy and arrogant US trade policies that help to keep Mexicans and other would-be immigrants from making a living at home?

I am a new Ham and have been to two ham fests this year put on by local clubs. Very disappointing. I thought maybe I could get some used equipment since I had none. If I had been looking for 23 channel CBs or obsolete computer junk I would have been all set. I thought selling old 23 channel Cbs was illegal because of the power.There was a real dealer at the one so I got a new VX 150 from them.Got home and there was no paperwork in the box. Went back to get it at 11:45 AM. The thing was suppose to last till 1PM.
Everyone was already packing up all their junk.This dealer had no time to find my manual and stuff and said they would mail it.Took 2 weeks. Lucky for me I found a manuel on line. I'll still try different ham fests but if the granddaddy was a bust I don't know about the small clubs.

I thought it was kind of sick too. Why would anyone want to drop 750 lbs. bombs on the Mexicans when we have 5000 lbs. bombs that will take out a city block, and get the burrowing little bean eaters right in their tunnels?

E-bay and other on line auctions can never replace spotting a part or piece of equipment you need that isn't worth the dealers time to list, or would cost too much to ship. More than once I've asked about something and was told to take it, so they didn't have to haul it home.
I've never seen an E-bay listing giving something away, and paying the shipping to your door.

Shuuuu, don't tell everyone. That's half to reason to get a flea market space. That way most of the time you get in before the general public and scoop up the good deals....

You have a point there - not that I totally agree with the poster you replied to. I've had some real bargains "handed" to me so they didn't have to be hauled home.
Actually, each venue has its own place in life. Problem with Dayton and other hamfests is between fuel costs and so on - there are more and more factors involved keeping people away. Ham radio itself isn't what it used to be. Then, some clubs who've had them - as I've heard it - had inner battles as to how things are to be done and so on. So club politics played a part along the line. I'm sure we could list many reasons for failures as they're being seen. Question is, who has the "answers"? Times are changing. Things change with time and I see it here in my own town - People DO NOT like change. I'm sorry to see some things go too - but there's not much you can do about some things.

It has nothing to do with liberalism or conservatism. It has to do with American sovereignty. I'm glad you sympathize with the US citizens living on the border, but 10% of the Mexican population is now in the US. That's a conservative estimate.

Clearly Ebay and other internet sites won't completely replace in person sales, be it a hamfest, garage sale or estate auction. But the ease of bringing large numbers of buyers and sellers together via some internet connection has had a significant impact on brick and mortar operations. The ease of transacting a sale electronically be it for a Kenwood 940 or a spinning wheel can't be ignored. And the sellers that fail to react in some way will be left behind.

I have a friend who's a professional flea marketeer, he told me that for an 8 AM opening time, he's already walking around at 6:30 AM buying stuff- and by the time the public gets there, the stuff that's worth $200, that was selling for $25-50, is gone- other marketeers already bought it

then, they put it on ebay when they get home

what doesn't sell, goes back to the market 2 weeks later constant cycle

the average joe can get lucky here and there, and find some stuff under bushels, etc., or from someone that set up late, or someone that finally moved off a high price

but for the most part, the VERY early bird, gets the worm anything you see sitting at a flea market late in the day, was most likely already tried on ebay, and didn't reach reserve, or got no bids.

sometimes you'll see stuff at flea markets that seems valuable, and underpriced, and no one is biting that's cuz the marketeers already know, that particular item is hammered on ebay, too many listed, and the price is down- so they are cutting their losses and just dumping it marketeers will tell you, they'd rather sell it cheaper at the show, than for slightly more on ebay- because of ebay and paypal fees, and packaging work involved- and nitpicking assholes like DeserTBob on EBay, who want gold for a penny and free shipping

Dave I hate to tell you but we have one in Vancovuer, Canada as well. So it's not just Southern California that has the problem with fowl mouth operators. I was making adelivery in Vancouver, British Columbia when I dialed into one of the local 2 meter repeaters and I couldn't believe my ears. The language was so fowl that I've removed that frequency from all my radios. Like yourself I though I was listening to the CB in the truck in stead of a amateur radio repeater. I'm a truck drive and ruff language is part of the trade, but not on the air ways and least of not on amateur radio. I've been involved with amateur radio for 43 years and yes I had a CB license back when we had to pay for them too. In the old days it was a required item in a truck and it still is if you do the I-5 corridor from the Canadian border down and back once a week. Let's face California produce is a hot commodity in Canada, we don't grow oranges up here, something to do with the misquitoes the size of humming birds, hi hi.
But like your problem in southern Cal, we have almost the same thing in souther BC, sadly do say. I remember when this paticular repeater VE7RAG use to be the one to have good contacts on. For an old truck driver it was a God sent when I couldn't find the place I had to deliver too, all it took was a "anyone know where this place is" and my call and I would have people climbing all over each other to tell you where and how to get to it. But now, forget it, the polite curtious operators have all but given up on this repeater. I can only hope they clean it up before 2010 when the Winter Olympics are on, it would not be a nice picture to paint for our hobby and for Canada's reputation either.
I remember the days when you didn't dare make a mistake and let a swear word out over the air. You would get a citation in the mail registered and a knock on your door by DOC (Canadian version of the FCC) to inspect your station. Too many budget cuts have turned our hobby into the next CB band(s) I'm sad to say.

The granddaddy was not a bust, it was awesome. Had a great time (always do). There was about anything you could want, I think, either used out in the flea market, or new inside the buildings.

Yeah, right. What about the people who don't even have a computer,

I think Peter is pretty much right with his observations, Project sets are plentiful in the Northeast and upper mid west, and the West coast folks are really desperate! I very seldom buy on ebay, but do keep a watch on things. The only things I ever buy are large pickup only consoles that are close by. Most of the Restored stuff I sell ends up in the deep south or on the west coast, the Cost of living is so high in California that a Nice restoration at Retail WITH shipping across country is still a bargain out there.

Ah, Ron....

RANT WARNING

You need to understand the essential difference between a "Flea Market" and a Hamfest or Radio Meet. Fleas are just that. Locations where mostly crap is redistributed amongst a few, and mostly Chinese Junque is sold at no-better-than- Cosco or Sam's Club prices, but somehow the appeal is the 'story' and perceived bargain vs. the actual reality. Those that do it "professionally" (NOT ALL, mind) are in many ways the cockroaches of society inhabiting the dark corners and hiding under filth to avoid paying taxes and to skim from society without paying any freight. I once was present when the State Police together with the FBI and quite a number of local police groups raided the Pennsauken (NJ) Drive-In flea-market. They focused _only_ on the 'professional' dealers, some 90% of which (a line of handcuffed mostly-men that stretched over 100 yards, shoulder-to-shoulder) were selling all/some of the above: Stolen goods (Wonder where that "Sears Craftsman" or Still-in-the-Clamshell Channel Lock or Klein or Mac or Snap-On comes from?), knock-off goods, illegal goods (baby clothes not fire-treated, recalled tools and/or appliances), mislabeled goods (made in USA... NOT), pirated goods and so forth. And the Feds were there for the Tax-Evasion stuff as well as the across-state-lines stuff. The 20% of the dealers that were in it for the weekend, cleaning out the attic and the like were entirely ignored. Very damned little of it any more has anything to do with "recycling" used goods. Yard sales and garage sales, church bazaars and such are about the last refuge for that kind of thing. But keep in mind that every time one buys something stolen or a return or a recall or a torn-cover paperback at a flea, one is quite directly taking someone's job away, usually right here in the good old USA. Who gets sued if a recalled defective Craftsman or Stanley or Klein or Channel Lock Tool sold at a fleamarket hurts someone? The "vendor" that stole it and resold it? Not hardly. And whose prices _all_ go up as a result? Ours. And is it Chinese manufacturers that go out of business due to overhead costs? Nope. But, very damned few of us think about this stuff when we see that tempting tool on the table. "We" figure we can buy it at the flea, then take it back to Sears if it breaks.... GOOD thinking.

On the other hand, there are "shows" dedicated to certain hobbies. My approach to a 'timed' show (opens X and closes Y) is to not sell _ANYTHING_ except as-marked before the show opens. I tell people that I will negotiate price one hour (1hr) after the show opens officially, but not until then. Period. And when someone askes me what is my

"dealer price" I add 20% automatically. But that is just me. Once upon a time, one dealer at Kutztown, very early on when it was a 1/2 day affair was all over me as I was unloading. And as this individual would easily have made three of me (no kidding, and I am 6'-3", at 220lbs) it was annoying to say the least. He was picking stuff up, pulling stuff out of boxes, turning stuff over (and leaving it) and such. All the while pattering on how ridiculous my prices were. At the time, I had sprained an ankle and was using a blackthorn stick just after sitting or driving until I loosened up. I actually had to raise it and call for witnesses before this particular jackass moved on. At the end of the day, I drove home with a full pocket and an empty vehicle. His load was still with him, literally and figuratively. I will not say that my raising a very loud stink to get him off my stuff had anything to do with that, but I would like to think so. I had a 'pot' to support the hobby for another year. It has pretty much been that way ever since. I cover my costs, and turn over my radios keeping fewer and fewer, but nicer and nicer radios, and fewer-but-very-much-nicer audio systems.

So, it is all in accordance with how one behaves, how one sees the world and how lady luck sees you. I have found as many bargains in the last 30 minutes of a flea market as getting there before set-up. Mostly I am buying for my own use and pleasure, resale is at best a tertiary concern even if that... This is a HOBBY for me, the moment I feel I am becoming predatory, buying for resale or otherwise treating it like a business, I take a deep breath and walk away. THAT IS ONLY ME. Others are free to behave as they see fit. But I want to be able to look any of my buyers in the eye years later and get a smile in return.

were we at the same Dayton?

It was my second one in five years.. $300 flight. $97 rooms at a Marriot and $ 75 for an Avis rental.

Great time, lots of stuff to see and would have bought a lot more if I had not flown in.

I think that the hamfests are down since the 80s and 90s but I also recall those fests had a ton of used computer dealers, so the number may have been artificially inflated as the way of build your own computer went away and those guys left.

Sure there was some overpriced stuff and they did not move. But there were some very reasonablely priced things that did.

I'll be back again in 3-5 years.

You cant touch or feel or converse as well with internet sales....nothing beats the face to face events, if they are well run. In the antique radio world, Extravaganza is one of the best, Bolingbrook is making a strong comeback from the Elgin days, Charlotte is strong and Kutztown is overflowing into the next pavilion.

All you have to do is have a good facility, be open to the general public for free or little money, and promote your show like crazy. An enforced set start time makes it more fair, as Extravaganza and Charlotte have proved. The other two should consider that...

I sold at Dayton in '96 and '97. It was sliding down then even in my opinion... I only sold about $1300 worth in two days... about half that could be considered profit. Not worth it for what was essentially 4.5 days worth of work (1 day loading, 2 days there, one day RT driving, half day unloading). I had all tube era stuff.. tube sockets, capacitors, trimmers, Ham type tubes, etc, etc. All the guys stolling by had "Rice Boxes" strapped to their belts and didnt know which end of a soldering iron to hold. One guy even held up an old RCA 811 tube to show his buddy and said "I remember when we used to use these things!" His buddy'd never seen a tube I think, and he was about 35, this being back in '96.
I had 100 pc bags of mylar and filter caps priced lower than anywhere, and I mean ANYWHERE. Still do.

Hi All,

I acquired a Pitch-Prop motor a number of years ago, with the intention of building a antenna rotator.
I still have the intention of doing this, and have checked the motor for operation. This works out very nice, and was able to control it to different speeds with different voltage.
I have a construction design for the mounting of the motor and gearbox to the tower, and antenna.

The problem I have now, is I wish to construct a suitable control unit, with digital readout, and the possibility of controlling via a mini PIC control, or via PC.

I have searched the internet without much success, so my next course of action was to see if anyone on these groups might be of help.
So I put my hands up for HELP! :)

Any help would be gratefully received.

Thanks in Advance.

Kevin, ZL1KFM.

I'm getting fed up with all the spics around here, because most of them are illegals, and they're overrunning the city. Decent White folks can't live in peace in Winchester any longer.

I'm going to move down South and live with the niggers in Birmingham. They at least know how to keep the spics in line, and the sistahs know how to keep White men happy.

I'll agree that you don't have any "fake" degrees...Because you have NO degrees at all.

Your "degrees" are imaginary. A lie. Deceit. Like the rest of your life.

You won't name the institutions, the disciplines in which you accomplished.

In otherwords...Not a single bit of documentary evidence that any of your claims were even remotely true.

Maybe you can get some left wing liberal whiners to feel sorry for you, but not likely. This is a free market, remember? Or would you prefer the government telling businesses what they can charge.

Excepting the readout, this should be a fairly routine motor control problem. Depending on what you want to do your control box could be as simple as a current-limited power supply and a couple of switches or as complex as a fully fed-back motion control system.

How's your electronics skills, and how fancy do you want it to be?

I also had a great time. This is my 43rd Dayton Hamvention in 45 years of being a ham. Yea, it's changed a bit, but still, IMHO, worth the price of admission. I found everything on my list, and at acceptable prices. Some things were indeed overpriced, but just walk away and keep looking. I'll not forget the old Johnson Speedex key (in excellent condition) that I bought from some guy in a cold drizzle for $8 a few Hamventions back. He was anxious to sell anything. Maybe the best buy I've ever made at a Ham 'tailgate' (or flea market if you like).
Of course it does help to be an hour away. No airplanes or hotel rooms does make it affordable and easy, no argument from me. If E-bay killed Dayton, wonder why all the people were there anyway. It was as crowded as usual.

I'm already looking forward to next year.

I honestly don't think $25 is that out of line. How much are boat shows, Home and Garden shows? Probably a LITTLE less but they draw from a much larger market and have significant vendor support.

I was hoping I'd see something in these groups about some new products or SOMETHING NEW...All I see is bitching.

C'mon, folks. Take things as they are. It's not going to be 1950 or 1970 or even 1990 again.

I do intend to go to the Hamvention next year...for the first time in 30 years!

I'll have to agree with this. I found what I was looking for plus an old Allied A2516 tube ham receiver practically given away because it had a blown fuse and missing cover screws. Other than that a great time seeing old friends, alot of new stuff, and the weather was perfect. I don't think Ebay can steal any of that. Maybe it wasn't the best place to find antique radios, but it's a HAMfest and old radios are not the majority of what you find there. If anyone thinks that the crowd is less because of Ebay, wrong!! Hamfest numbers have drifted downward in the past few years due to diminishing ranks in Ham Radio. Now if this were a computer show you'd see a bigger crowd. In short, you get what you get out of a Hamfest. Just because you don't find alot of give aways at the flea market doesn't mean it's a disaster. There is always plenty of other things to do. This is true for the smaller hamfests as well.

I'm going to recommend against electronic feedback unless you are a control systems hobbyist... I did PID (proportional-integral-derivative) servo on a homebrew rotating mast so I didn't need a readout and eventually decided to go with a rotation sensing pot, a voltage-to-current converter, and a surplus meter.

This was after I tweaked the PID to get rid of the oscillations but still had some average position errors...

I guess with a digital system it would be easier to optimize. Mine was all analog... and only one op amp, so the settings interacted :-)

Making the motor go and watching the meter is a more sensitive and intelligent form of feedback, as long as you've got a system you can't break by turning too far.

A simple pulse-width-modulator for speed control might be in the cards though. That way you send a variable duty cycle full-on full-off pulse train to the motor. Good torque and you don't need a variable power supply just to run the rotor.

I'm going to add one to my rotator soon... I've got that on manual right now... pulsing the switch makes a nice slow smooth rotation!

If you do like electronics projects for the sake of electronics projects, feedback control is an interesting way to go, though.

OK, so let me retract the advice against it... possibly you could do it

Hi Dan,

If anything, going digital has all the prospects of thrashing the antenna into shreds. The oscillations you speak of are eminently suited for an analog solution - you simply have to understand the nature of resonance, coupling (over, critical, and under), and attack.
If you don't, translating them into binary code will be impossible.

For instance, your average position errors were probably due to under/overshoot and a too heavily dampened system with too much gain.
No computer program is going to improve that.

It is entirely doable, check here your project using a Basic Stamp...

I would do it with digital position sensing, with an lcd display showing direction of antenna..

Richard,
Agreed on the suitability of an analog solution... I certainly made some steps toward critically damped operation. My circuit design was bad, though.

I didn't have a very analyzable problem; the rotator rotates one of those fiberglass surplus military masts with respect to another, so I get a lot of stick-slip, especially if there's a breeze (there are 12 feet of mast above this thing).

This is not to say a suitable set of P, I and D couldn't be found, and it would have been pretty slick if I'd set up right for empirical loop tuning, but I hadn't done that. I got pretty close by soldering components in and out.

I would have had a better time with a real multiple op amp circuit with a knob for each of P, I and D.

I think you hit the nail on the head regarding too heavily dampened with too much gain in the antenna rotator case. I just couldn't really tune the thing.

In my case, I just decided to throw up my hands and go to the simplest method so I could get on the air with a rotating antenna. I have a quite successful analog servo going every day with my remote antenna tuner (www.n3ox.net/projects/servo). That one is ever-so-slightly underdamped, proportional only, and works nicely. There's a little bit of hysteresis and it certainly could be improved, but I stopped at the good-enough-for-daily-operation level.

I guess what I meant by "going digital" was that depending on whether you're more comfortable with programming than a soldering iron (not me!) you might think about having a simple motor drive circuit and implement the admittedly complex PID loop in software/firmware.

You're absolutely right that you can't do this if you don't know how to do the analog...

Dan

Couldn't you have just bought during the actual convention? Even if you couldn't physically be in Dayton, couldn't you have just done an order over the phone or something? I'm sure they would've been happy to take your business while, you know, the sales were actually going on.

I picked up two 100-piece bags of .1 uF bypass caps for fifty cents apiece at American Science & Surplus a while back. That's more the exception than the rule there, though, because they usually know pretty much what items are worth.

Just cusrious...

What happens if you pipe the output of one radio in to 2 different amplifiers, and then take the output of the two amps and send them to two identical vertical antennas spaced a half wave apart and with equal length feedlines from the amplifiers.

Will the output of the two amplifiers add together in directions where the signal is in phase, or will it act like two different signals and interfere with each other?

Talking rotor position feedback ,instead of the traditional potmeter in bridge circuit with analogue meter readout ,you could try a low cost synchro system utilising 2 stepper motors from discarded hard drives , dot-matrix printers or flat bed scanners ,with 1 stepper motor mechanically coupled (either directly or via a reversed rotational reducer) to the rotor ,the other in the shack as a readout device. The circuit I found on the web (via Google)needs 5 wires between the stepper motor coupled to the rotor and the control unit ,located with the other stepper motor in the shack.
The circuit includes 4 TIP120 NPN transistors 2 LM324 dual Opamps and a few diodes and resistors. The stepper motor in the shack could either be provided with a rotating or sliding pointer (the latter from an old 1950-60s radio) , or be mechanically linked to a counter (for example from a discarded tape recorder)

A potential 'recycled components' project.

I thought someone here was selling tickets for over a hundred bucks- perhaps this is for vendors?

$25- is half what it costs to get into AWA antique radio conventions for it's true that's not too bad. Hosstraders IIRC is still like $12- though :).
I usually go in the Fall as it's not far for me.

Slow,
It's is a shame you have to:

1- talk like this and
2- have so little respect for others and 3- have no ability to rationally discuss prows and cons complex issues and 4- have a poor understanding of what makes a good ham and 5- have so little understanding some real-world practical aspects of this issue and most importantly...
6- show such poor ham characteristics.
7- and probably have so little real knowledge of ham radio, is my guess. and 8- be a troll

If you're also a 20 WPM extra, then we can easily do without your immature attitudes and behaviors here and on the bands.

Hey guys! it is also a shame you get drawn into these types and feed their small minds.

Hi everyone:

Thought I'd add a little POSITIVE life to counter the IMMATURITY that seems to (tragically!) permeate this newsgroup by asking this curious question...

How many of you out there have a webcam on your website? How many of you put your activities (e.g. DXpeditions, Field Day, or even club activities) on video and put the video on your website (or the club's website)?

Maybe a better question would be how many of you out there have A WEBSITE??

Reason I ask is because I'd like to either collect some links (if not start a ring) of Hams with webcams and/or Hams and/or Ham clubs who put their activities on video and put that video on their website. I think this would be such a COOL concept and DEFINATELY a unique way of PROMOTING AMATEUR RADIO. :)

If you or your club have video on your website (or know of a fellow ham or club who does), please either post it here or drop me a line @ kb0oxd@gmail.com as I'd really like to get started on this project ASAP. :)

We could also form a net on EchoLink or eQSO as well.. :)

SPAMMERS AND OTHER PEDOPHILES NEED NOT APPLY!!! My definition of "pedophile" is ANYONE like the idiots who were interviewed by Dateline NBC during their online child predators series or ANYONE like the idiots seen on "America's Most Wanted"

In any case, I look forward to your reply :)

Cheers & 73 :)

Why would you do that? It's the same as just splitting a single output from the radio. Depending on spacing and phase you can get of variety of different radiation patterns. You don't need to split it between two amps.

I split the output from my radio, lag one 90 degrees, put one in one yagi, put one in another yagi and get circular polarization.

Hi everyone:

I have decided to do something that some would consider to be a little off the wall. :)

I have decided to put ALL of my Field Day Activities on my website via my cam site. It'll be LIVE and archived in Windows Media format. If possible, I also plan to run a SHOUTcast & Streamer P2P stream as well via Jeeper One Radio, my Talk/Old Time Radio station. It too will be hopefully archived and will probably run in repeat during the overnight hours on Saturday Night.

I plan to operate mainly on six meters USB and probably FM should there be an opening. If not, then I'll probably be band-hopping between 6 and 2 USB & FM with maybe a smattering of 432 USB and/or 446 FM if in the event there is NO six meter opening (Being a no-code tech, I am limited to bands 50 Mhz. and above).

It'll all officially start Saturday June 24 @ 12:00 NOON Mountain - 2:00 PM ET, 8:00 PM GMT and end Sunday June 25 @ 12:00 NOON Mountain - 2:00 PM ET, 8:00 PM GMT with breaks for sleep, meals, and times which the bands just simply are not open and idle.

The websites for everything in question are as follows....

WEBCAM - http://www.freewebtown.com/kb0oxd/webcam.html (Also simulcast on my videos page @ http://www.freewebtown.com/kb0oxd/webcam2.html)

JEEPER ONE RADIO - http://www.freewebtown.com/jeeperone/radio/ (Click on the LISTEN LIVE link)

Hopefully there'll be an opening on six. If not, well then, I guess I'll just be working the locals I suppose. :)

I'll also be logged onto EchoLink and eQSO for those informal non-FD off air ragchew chats with Hams (especially those out in the field with WiFi access). :

So again....That's Saturday June 24 @ 12:00 NOON Mountain till Sunday June 25 @ 12:00 NOON Mountain with the breaks I mentioned above. Feel free to tune in and log on. :)

Cheers & 73 :)

Hi Tim,

My electronics skills are fairly good, I have built many projects over the time.
What I was wanting to do, is have a control box in the shack with a readout and left/right controls. And have the provision to also be able to have a PC control it.
I like the Pitch-prop motor, as it is strong, and can be controlled easy.

The way I control it at the moment, is via a 2 voltage system.
The pitch-prop runs at 36volts for full speed, and when I wish to slow it down for small movements, I use a second set of controls at 15volts. Not the best way of doing it, but it works.
I then look out the window and see where it is pointing. I know where N, E, S, W are on my section.

As to price on the parts, I would like to keep it down to around a couple of hundred dollars. :)

Regards and thanks for your input.

I wouldn't go quite THAT far BUT.... :D

This not only goes for DARA, but also for the local Ham clubs as well.

Furthermore, the local clubs need to wien themselves off of using the local county fairgrounds for their hamfest site too. Problem is, where could they go besides renting out a sizable chunk of the local flea market that EVERYONE (Hams and non-Hams alike) go to?

Cheers & 73 :)

I have decided to do something that some would consider to be a little off the wall. :)

I have decided to put ALL of my Field Day Activities on my website via my cam site. It'll be LIVE and archived in Windows Media format. If possible, I also plan to run a SHOUTcast & Streamer P2P stream as well via Jeeper One Radio, my Talk/Old Time Radio station. Hey Kevin:

http://www.wescottdesign.com/articles/pidwophd.html
http://www.wescottdesign.com/articles/Friction/friction.html

If you want to control it from a PC I'd suggest that you drive an H bridge from a microprocessor, with a PID controller in there to make it go. The biggest key to making a PID loop without doing a bunch of math is to keep your ambition under control -- if you have to go fast, then you need to delve into theory.

As pointed out, PID control can be tricky -- even though I'm a control systems professional there's a good chance that if I did it rev 1.0 would just use the micro to implement virtual buttons, with feedback control for rev 1.1. You definitely want to make sure all the pieces are working before you close the loop.

there can be issues with phasing if done right no problem but ifyou are

Depends--, if in phase, Both INPUT, and OUTPUT, would add (double power, if SAME power on both,
Also would add, if 180 degrees OUT of Phase, both Input, and Output. And this would be the same as with Push-Pull amp (both input, and output). but if In Phase, on input, and OUT of Phase, on Output,or vice versa, theoretically, would result in 0 Output. And, if in different phases, probably would make a great interference source!!!

Get a grip dude, that is the way sales work, it starts at a certain time and ends at a certain. That time may not be on the schedule you like, oh well, that is what being the guy setting up the sale is all about. Don't like it, make your own product, market it, set up a sale and then let folks who want the special price a day or two later have it, it will be your business and you can run it any way you like.

Jeeze, I hate whiners!!!!

I would assume the following: If you use a splitter with an equal length of coax to the two amps, you would be able to get 100 watts out from the radio to be 50 watts into each amp. I would suspect that you would have double the power out to the antenna assuming you used the same length of coax from the amps to the antenna.

Of course, you have to deal with impedance problems with the splitting of the coax, for example, two 50 ohm cables would result in 25 ohms to the amps. Not good. then the two 50 ohm outputs from the amps would result in 100 ohms to the antenna, not good again....

Same affect as feeding two antennas from a single amp. Although it is sometimes a good way to get more watts/$

Although you have stipulated same feedline lengths there could be some phase delays inside the amps you dont know about (eg filter components). You should of course be able to compensate for this by varying line length. A difference in output power from each will also skew the radiation pattern.

If the antennas are thus fed in phase and the amps produce the same power you will get max radiation perpendicular to a line drawn between the antennas and minimum radiation in line with them. You can play with all kinds of phase delay/line length and spacing variations to get a good mix of patterns. They interfere from the standpoint that you get phase addition and cancellation of the two signals combining. This is how driven array antennas work.

Do you have a specific application in mind?

With Roger making so many allegations on a daily basis, it would take so much to keep up with all of them. Of course, he is nothing more than a simpleton and has a serious level of mental retardation. What else would one expect of a 50 year old Momma's boy?

They need the little guys in white coats from the local friendly asylum to come for a visit and take them away. It's obvious that Scheissman is a mentally unstable individual. Not to mention one who lacks basic civility in any case. If one psychoanalyzed Roger, you would find the mental processes of a teenage boy rather than a 50 year old. It's all to obvious when all he can do is to pop off his mouth and make inane and often stupid comments on a daily basis. Even the town drunk has more sense than he.

Interesting how you use the same IP numbers though! Are you such a delusional fraud that you have several different accounts going through the same IP number. Duh boy. Is that hard to figure out? Or are you hiding something about yourself? Is there a reason why your oblong head is so well planted in your ass. Are you what? Or are you a loser without a life? Isn't that right Scheissman? But you're living proof that no matter how much a person or society does, that you'll still be white trash at the end of the day.

An idiot calling anyone else an idiot. How convenient? Of course, it shows his lack of intellect and basic reason skills. It's also hypocrisy but Scheissman is used to that.

I would suspect that it is a lot more at least 20 to 30 million. It's funny because in every small town even here that these people are crawling all over the place. If you get a chicken processing plant in your area or some other labor intensive industry you can expect they will be here. I've seen places where you have 10 or so of these people living in the same house together. No wonder they can live here 600 dollars monthly housing divided by 10 is 60 bucks per person.

The corporates and big businesses are the ones who want them here to drive down the wages of the average American.

What's to get through?

As pointed out by another poster in this thead, there's some basis in truth as to your cuplability in the original post, Mork.

Maybe you didn't do it...Other than being very ugly in it's

Yes, Yes, yes,
but what are your thoughts on the following:

No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass all elements required for their license class.

Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

Make the no-code Tech license one year non-renewable.

Hello Sad:
All of your points are valid. This has been going on for a long time, not only here on usenet on the air as well.

The gay freak not only attacks hams but also insults our fellow radio hobbiest over in the CB & shortwave groups as well. No one could possibly have known that Mark was a homosexual if he didn't brag about it. Now the sick freak has even involved his elderly father in the mess.

Don't worry about it,Sad. This too will pass. With his queer lifestyle it won't be very long 'till the HIV sets in.

Meta-comment: I think that if all of the ideas you propose were actually enacted into regulation, and then ten years were go by, the United States Amateur Radio Service would be unlikely to have more than 1/4 of the number of licencees that it has today.

That's great if you want to create a "private club" for a few years after that.

However, it's lousy if you want there to actually be an Amateur Radio Service twenty or thirty years from now. With so few licensees and as little activity as I think there'd be after such a decimation, the odds are good that a lot of the U.S. amateur radio bands would be
"re-purposed" for other spectrum users.

>No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass
>all elements required for their license class.

Unlikely to pass, due to the cost and bureaucratic overhead.

I'd guess that at least a third of current licensees coming up for renewal would decide not to bother, and let their licenses lapse (and that's in addition to the rate of non-renewal which takes place today).

>The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

I'd have no real objection to this. Dunno if it's a good idea or a bad idea.

>Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

This will never happen, for two major reasons:

[1] CW is no longer an international treaty requirement AT ALL.
The results of the WARC conferences made it clear that the international community considers CW a useful mode, and a big part of amateur tradition, but that it's no longer in sufficient use in military/commercial applications to justify making it a legal requirement for amateur HF licensing.

[2] The FCC has made it quite clear (in their responses to the numerous petitions filed about [1]) that they no longer consider it in the public interest to require CW proficiency for an HF license. They are proposing to remove the CW requirement entirely.

In its filings, the ARRL has proposed retaining the existing 5 WPM requirement for Amateur Extra. The FCC's response adds up to "No.
Not justified. No CW requirement at all."

My understanding is that the ARRL's comments received from their membership, and the comments received directly by the FCC in response to the various petitions, are pretty consistent. Only a small percentage of the people who have commented, feel as you do. Most commenters either want to eliminate the CW requirement entirely (as many other countries have done), or eliminate it for General and retain it for Extra.

What you propose is also unlikely to happen because the FCC and ARRL both remember what happened the last time they tried tightening the rules and raising the requirements and trying to force people to upgrade. My understanding (from reading - I wasn't licensed back then) is that the Powers That Be concluded that this sort of incentive licensing pressure created more resentment, and did more damage to the health of the amateur radio community, than whatever benefits came from it justified.

I've read statements from the FCC, over the past few years, to the effect that they're just not interested in taking operating privileges away from anyone.

>Make the no-code Tech license one year non-renewable.

Once again, I think that the number of licensees that the Amateur Radio Service would lose (or would never get in the first place, once people learned of the non-renewable status) would outweigh the possible advantage of this approach (giving licensees more of an inducement to increase their level of knowledge, and upgrade).

I've done it with a pair of 160 watt Mirage amps on 2-meters.

Many years ago I owned one of the first high power (bout 600W) solid state 2-meter amps. Inside it was just several amps in parallel on the same, large circuit board. Capacitance on the input adjusted the phase and you basically tuned it for max. The output was the same way. However it used the earlier bi-polar transistors (this would have been in the late 70's) and there was quite a bit of interaction between input and output.

I picked up a pair of 160 watt Mirage amps off e-Bay. With the Mirage amps I disabled the internal keying on one and set it up as a slave to the other. If you leave the internal keying on in both they will cycle back and forth which will have some rather undesirable effects. I used a C3i power divider/combiner on the input and another on the outputs. I tuned them up pretty much as I did the old amp and ended up with over 300 W out.

This approach really need amps of the same make, model, and age (no design changes) to work the best but it will work. OTOH if starting from new it's no more expensive to go out and purchase one of the new 380 watt TE amps. The high power Mirage is a bit more expensive.

sc,

Lesee... Well, I believe you have some discussable concepts here.

In other areas there are currency requirements. Flying, for example. If you haven't kept up, you need refresher flights with an instructor. We first try to outline what is gained / lost over time and whether re-testing can address these issues. Old timers will be required to learn about QPSK and all the modern concepts.

Then we go from here.

One general area you seem to fail to address is some of the practical aspects regarding number of licensees and the viability of retaining the Amateur Service all together. If the number of Hams keeps declining, will there be ANY licenses...and do you (in general) want to preserve something, or kill it all if numbers fall, manufacturers stop producing products, etc... This can not be ignored in the rest of the discussions.

I know Extras who couldn't build a thing, yet are active, intelligent and law abiding. They have interest I can discuss with them. I also know no-code'ers that are the most serious hams around...not to mention several that came from CB and are now died-in-the-wool-hams.
I also hear Extras on the air that should aim for a tree the next time they drive a car.

Is learning CW a "right of passage" and an effort that helps to strengthen the Ham...yes...for some. Does it guarantee an excellent, expert Ham? Not by a long shot. That comes from elsewhere.

However, based on the post of yours that I responded to, I choose not to go further since you have demonstrated such a poor attitude, I feel it is not worth the time exploring with you. Ill pick more important battles. Enjoy your Hamm activities (if you have any) and be content. you brand or devisiveness accompliches nothing except, perhaps allowing a few of the responders to vent and possibly hear (though by accident) some reasonable points.

Do you have a call, name? With a pseudonym like yours, I'd think you'dbe on the other side. What are you affraid of?

73, Steve K9DCI

> The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

How about the licence grade depending on the score? How about much more strict requirements for on-air procedure. I hear many who have licenses and still don't know how to communicate efficiently in emergency drills or ID properly.

> Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

CW only was a requirement due to international treaty in the first place. That is no longer the case. You are clrarly hung up on CW. WHY? What does it bring / guarantee? Why is CW so much more important that all other aspects of on-air operation?

> Make the no-code Tech license one year non-renewable.

This still comes directly from the "CW or nothing" concept.

I'm not sure if this faut I describe below accounts for the curious problems I've been experiencing, but it might be relevant, possibly...
When I'm displaying (in rectangular mode as opposed to polar) a sweep from 4Mhz to 1.3Ghz I get a pretty flat horizontal line right across the screen as perhaps you might expect (with no load attached to the test bridge and the port left open. Now if I stick my finger inside this port and probe around; I get very little response from the trace.
Likewise if I now short the port, there's very little variation in the trace. I'd have thought making major changes to the electrical characteristics at the test port would give rise to some pretty extreme waveform changes; but this isn't the case. It seems like it's missing a large amount of senstitivity and I can only think maybe the y-amplifier might have gone low-gain. Does that make any kind of sense in terms of the problem I'm describing? Can anyone suggest a test to confirm or eliminate this possibility?
Thanks,
Paul

We generally stay at the Holiday Inn at one of the Sidney exits. $69 Thursday night (business rates), $59 Friday and Saturday nights. Can always get it, it's outside the sphere of influence of the Hamvention. 40 miles or so to Hara, but that goes by real quick. Sits right beside a Bob Evans restaurant, and across the street from a Waffle House, so breakfast is guaranteed to be good, which is all you need. Dinner can be taken anywhere near the Hamvention, then just drive back north. If you don't have an 8 mpg truck, its just fine.

Hose the test signal output directly into the, um, I think it's A and B ports on that instrument, one at a time, and see if you get responses when they are selected for display. You can just put a filter in-line between the generator and the receiver channel you're testing and see at least roughly the response you're getting. Check the receiver gain settings and display scaling to make sure they are working properly, assuming you get something reasonable displayed. I'm assuming you can display A and B independently and not just as a ratio to the R(eference) input, but I don't recall the details of that instrument off the top of my head. Clearly it wouldn't be the amplifier that drives the display y-axis, as you're getting deflection in both directions with the polar display.

Divide and conquer: is the analyzer OK? If it is, then look into the T/R test set. If it isn't, look into the analyzer...

With Fatass Davies whining to get his asskicking hidden away on a daily basis, it's no wonder that even his parents consider him a retard. Let's see a 32 year old man that goes around calling himself a "time lord" and has yet to have the first piece of pussy. It can't get any more pathetic then Lloyd Austin Davies.

What's "2 Test?" Oh, that's right, Roger Wiseman did something you couldn't do in the first place, pass the CW and General license exams (even twice, you can't pass them the first time!) and upgrade to Extra class. Funny how the retest letter from the FCC gave no such reason. You need to work on your reading comprehension, Lardass, you'll aways be a loser pizza boy. And a no code loser.

No I don't. Why is this particular idiotic thread in every major ham radio group? It finally dropped out of DX, and now I find it in "equipment".
How about you children make your own little group, all climb into it, and make each other happy.

Yeah, but the senile old farts still believe they are not only first responders but that they are on the cutting edge of technology. Let them wallow in their delusions of how important ham radio is.

Our "radio" club is more of a social circle. Rarely is anything technical dicussed, just gossip about other hams. We meet at Golden Corral. When someone brings their kids along, the senile old farts start yammering about future hams, and when is he going to get his ham ticket? Meanwhile, the kids sit there and eat with iPods stuck in their ears, cell phones in their hands, and chattering about IM and MySpace.com All of which may just as well be a foreign language to the delusional old farts. LOL!

Serves the OF right! They should not have invented and developed that stuff, shudda stayed with stone tablets.
This year we celebrate Tesla's 150th birthday - da first hams and greatest engineering genius that gave us so much, yet those with iPods that can't

I don't think that's entirely true. I'm working for my license.
Learning code, radio and antenna theory, SMT, and every other thing I can think of. Got an ARRL Handbook ('91), a cheapo hand key, and a G.
West test book. Do I think code should be required? Yes. IMO, knowing what I'm doing is what being a ham is all about. Knowing code is part of that. In fact, with the possible spread of BPL, CW may again become the only way to punch through. If I just wanted to press a button and yap, I'd buy a CB or a cellphone.

Don't need to. Went to Dayton last weekend and only ONE-THIRD (1/3) of the total outdoor flea market spaces were taken, meaning occupied. Not only that, I was actually able to park in a lot at a strip mall just down the road from the Arena. I have been going to Dayton since 1980. I've missed going only 4 Years out of 26. This Year was the absolute smallest attendance I have ever seen.
This alone should tell you something folks.
I doubt that I'll be going again next Year, if ever again. Finally do not believe the "official" attendance figures. They lie thru their teeth worse than 5 pre-owned auto salesmen.

Note the comments made by Roger that others have run from doorstep visitors...he quotes Les Locklear, a known turd, who authored a bogus "account" of Oris Grim visiting Lloyd some years back. Nothing of the sort happened, but that has not swayed Roger from proclaining this as fact.
Roger, on the other hand, has gone to great lengths to either deny or say nothing of Dave's up front and honest visit to Roger's front door just a few weeks ago.
While Roger accuses Lloyd of being a coward, it was Roger who hid behind HIS door and cowered in the back room until Dave and his wife went away.
Roger first claimed he was home and chose to not answer the knock. Later, as all Roger lies go, he dummied up yet another story and claimed that his girl friend was alone in his house and refused to answer while Roger was at a local grocery store.
This is false. Roger has no girlfriend. He was home when Dave knocked on his door and Roger hid, cowering, in the rearmost corners of his house.
For Roger to accuse Lloyd of hiding from "visitors" is the ultimate of hypocrisy.
It was Roger who, afraid, ran to the back room and hid from Dave.

Dave and his wife were up front and honest. It was Coward Roger (ab8mq) who hid in the dark recesses of his 600 sq foot home while dribbling urine down his leg.

I get approx 27 mpg with my Subaru WRX and there's 3 of us to share the gas if I were all that uptight about the gas, which I'm not. I don't lose any sleep, I just go to bed before Jay Leno instead of after. And that's a pretty low rate for Hamvention weekend. Anyway, its only $8.88 for gas per day, which is just dirt cheap. Find a motel like Holiday (pool, hi speed access) that is closer for the $8.88. Unlikely.

As for the driving, I drove 550 miles to get there, and 550 back, so 40 is just not noticable...

Note the fact Lardass ran his mouth on the internet and was a no-show at Dalton hamfest. He also hid behind the HUD apartment door (it's a small two roomer , less than 300 square feet) and sreamed "leave me alone" in his whiny high pitched lisping girly voice. Google has all this archived.

This was e-mailed to me this morning by Oris Grim an old friend.

I happened to be traveling through Huntsville, Alabama early this morning, I deceided to stop in Athens and see just how tough Lloyd Davies was going to act when he saw me in person.

Many of you know that a few years ago, Lloyd got smart with several people in the Deja Newsgroup (now Google) and I issued a challenge to him. I told him I would be attending the Dalton, Ga. Hamfest if he wanted to continue the conversation. He said he would be there and he was going to kick my ass.

Well, Lloyd was a no-show and continued the verbal assault on the newsgroups. He always talks tough behind his keyboard. And, I understand he is now doing the same sort of thing on the NIM Busters Board.

Well, about 8.35 this morning (December 23, 2004) I located his apartment in a nasty looking section of town. I'm a pretty good sized man, but I put my gun in my back waistband after exiting the car. I located his apartment and knocked on the door. The doorbell was missing and bare wires were sticking out of the wall. I heard someone say I'm coming and shortly the door opened with a safety chain lock still engaged. He asked what I wanted and I introduced myself and asked if we could have a conversation. He turned white as a sheet and attempted to slam the door, but I already had a foot wedged in the opening. He started shaking uncontrollably and was shouting leave me alone, leave me alone! I told him he didn't seem so tough now face to face and then noticed a putrid odor of urine and he was pissing his pants and crying like a baby. Please leave me alone Oris he said, I was just having fun and meant no harm, please leave, please. I could see the filthy floor of this apartment and the dirty floors and the stench of a grown man pissing on himself were almost enough to make me want to vomit, and I don't have a queasy stomach. Upon telling him that this time he would escape a ass kicking and not to ever get a smart mouth with me again and a verbal yes from him, I departed. That apartment complex looked like a crackhouse, niggers everywhere, filthy grounds and stairwells. Junk cars everywhere and garbage overflowing the garbage cans.

This Lloyd is nothing more than white trash that delivers pizzas and could afford to take a trip out of town if the ticket cost $5.00.

I'm sending this to a friend who despises Lloyd Davies and he wanted to post it for everyone to see just what kind of chickenshit asshole this Davies really is.

Google has no such thing archived. As a matter of fact, when the alleged email from Oris appeared on NIM Busters, Oris hadn't even spelled his last name correctly! The forger had managed to trip himself up with sloppy work.

After the spelling error was pointed out, Wiseman and pals mysteriously showed up with a new, correctly-spelled forgery.

This crap is soooo old Wiseman, that it has no impact at all any longer. Your lies were long ago exposed, and you only make yourself look totally nuts by clinging to those lies.

Oh indeed it WAS a forgery. And the forger outed himself in a couple of different ways: (1) Oris doesn't write in the style used, and (2) Oris spelled his own name incorrectly.

Thus the forger looked like the fool that he is.

I LOVE it when you hand stuff like this to me. You really believe that the statement above is obviously in error, don't you? In fact, you are revealing your own profound ignorance.

We covered this topic a long time ago, and even your old DeVry instructor agreed that I was correct. Basically, you can have zero loss and infinite VSWR on a line (an ideal twin lead with an open termination is a simple example), or you can have total loss with a 1:1 VSWR at the transmitter end of the line. A very lossy coaxial line makes an excellent dummy load, delivering no power to an open termination, and yet showing a 1:1 VSWR on the transmitting end. You can also come up with a 1:1 VSWR for a completely lossless, ideally terminated line, thereby making it quite obvious that line loss and SWR are not directly related.
